PRESIDENT SEEKS 6 AIDES IN SHAKEUP

Text of Roosevelt Message, Page 7

By GEORGE DURNO
International News Service Staff Correspondent

Washington, Jan. 12—President Roosevelt today proposed to Congress a sweeping reorganization of government that would leave him—in his own words—as the one manager of the executive branch under constitutional provision. The electorate, he said, would determine whether a good job was being done.

In a special message and a voluminous report, he recommended:

1—Creation of two new departments of cabinet rank—the "department of social welfare" and the "department of public works."

6 EXECUTIVE AIDES

2—Appointment of "six high-grade executive assistants" to the President who could give him constant advice and information in "dealing with the regular departments and agencies."

3—Abolition of the present 3-man civil service commission in favor of a "civil service administrator" appointed by the President who will put government workers on "a career basis and a merit system" with higher salaries for those found deserving and making them permanent if they pass "a

Pope Suffers New Sinking Spell; Stimulants Aid

Vatican City, Jan. 12 (AP)—Pope Pius suffered another sinking spell today, after disregarding doctors' warnings not to receive visitors. He was revived with stimulants.

Shortly before, doctors expressed fear of new complications in the Pontiff's right leg, where a varicose condition, similar to that in the left leg, was developing.

The Pope, weakened by a night of pain and fatigued by labored breathing, mustered his strength in the service of the church, so his successor would not "find things undone."

BULLETIN

Seattle, Jan. 12 (AP)—The Seattle Times today quoted an unnamed authority as stating clothing of Charles Mattson, kidnap-murder victim, had been found in an automobile abandoned at an Everett service station.

The newspaper stated Federal Bureau of Investigation agents impounded the automobile and the clothing.

At Everett, Sheriff Walter Faulkner denied any knowledge of the reported find.

The account here stated the driver of the car left suddenly after asking the service station attendant to fill the gasoline tank. The attendant saw the clothing, not bloodstained, the Times' informant said, and called government men.

'GO GET KIDNAPER!' ROOSEVELT ORDER

Washington, Jan. 12 (AP)—President Roosevelt declared today the murder of 10-year-old Charles Mattson in Washington State has "shocked the nation," and added every means at the command of the government must be enlisted to capture the perpetrator of "this ghastly crime."

Simultaneously, Attorney General Cummings offered a $10,000 reward for arrest of the kidnapers of the boy.

In an official statement, the President said the justice department was engaged in a search which "will not be terminated until the murderer is caught."

Stephen T. Early, a White House secretary, telling of the Chief Executive's reaction to first news of discovery of the boy's body said in effect Mr. Roosevelt had directed Cummings to "go get them."

The text of the President's statement follows:

FRONTIER JUSTICE CRY RISES IN HUNT FOR KIDNAPER

MANHUNT OF OLD WILD WEST STARTS IN WILDERNESS

furnished G-men their most tangible clue today as they and hundreds of other peace officers and enraged citizens joined in the most intensive manhunt the Northwest ever has known.

At the same time there was reported here a startling throw-back to the days of the old west—an asserted plan by friends of the slain 10-year-old boy's family to visit summary mining camp justice on the black-bearded desperado who spirited the boy into the night last December 27 and then bashed in his head and tossed his nude body into the snow near Everett, 65 miles north of here, where it was found by a rabbit hunter.

The federal men concentrated on clay, which does not appear in the vicinity of the spot where the boy's body was discovered in the belief that if they can find that peculiar blue clay soil they will know where the boy was held and murdered and be at once on the track of the fiendish slayer.

The [illegible] was reported by a prominent Tacoma resident who sat in his [illegible] home here and discussed lynching with an International News Service correspondent and five other persons in these words:

"We're all set to take care of this fiend who smashed Charles' face and head. He'll never get into court. He doesn't deserve any consideration. He should be removed quickly from this life.

"You'd be surprised at the men who have called me and told me they are ready to go along with me and string this fellow up. The justice of the old West is what is needed in this case, for it will be proper punishment and will deter any future would-be kidnapers in Washington."

"TWIGS FOR BONFIRE"

Then the spokesman calmly announced:

"And we might gather a few twigs for a bonfire."

However, there was no implication that the extra-legal idea had been confided to the grief-torn parents of the stolen boy, Dr. and Mrs. William W. Mattson. Quite the contrary, the spokesman made it clear that the Mattsons know nothing of the asserted plan and would be the first to raise their voices against it in favor of the lawful avenues of justice.

"However," concluded the spokesman, "we feel strongly our way."

SEVERAL GOOD CLUES

Scientific and deputies' police and state highway patrolmen, G-men and citizens they enlist, on an army and [illegible] to get the body of Charles Mattson—dead or alive.

The stealthy but "several good clues"—a plain tire track, a description of the slayer's car from several persons who saw him drive away, fingerprints on his ransom notes and the most gruesome, but perhaps the most important, prints of his fingers on the nude and frozen body of his victim. Also there were the descriptions of the three children who saw him whisk Charles away.

The coroner at Everett said the dilation of the body indicated death took place Saturday and that the body was buried into the snowy underbrush Sunday night. This coincided with farmers who said they heard dogs barking near the death scene late Sunday.

The slayer drove his car over interrupted snow, leaving a tire imprint which has protected and photographed by G-men.

CARRIED TO TOMB

The boy was not killed at the spot where his body was found. There was no blood on the snow. All evidence showed he was carried in his snow sheathed limb from a distance, how far is not known now.

All available information about the murderer-abductor was broadcast over the nationwide—his maddened wild eyes, hoard, rambling conversation is no good. Boston, height of 5 feet 10 inches, weight 150 pounds.

Roads were blocked and raids took place hourly in cities within a 150-mile radius of Tacoma and Everett. The largest trap in this part of the country was all set to be sprung.

SPEARHEAD OF DRIVE

In the spearhead of the drive were the 45 G-men gathered at Tacoma at inception of the case by Harold Nathan, assistant chief of the famous crime suppressors.

Each of the federal men carried a "tommy" gun, the deadly little machine gun first made famous in gang warfare.

As the various groups of officers set out from the point where the body was found, a state policeman shouted:

"I hope we don't have to take this fiend alive."

"I don't intend to," said Deputy Sheriff Crisply.

The code of the Old West was in operation again.

The havoc in grief wrought by the kidnaper, believed by all investigators to be murderously insane, was etched graphically at the Mattson home.

FATHER BROKEN

The slain boy's father, Dr. William W. Mattson, a former University of Washington football player, a highly respected surgeon in this community, who cared for his patients while his boy was missing, was completely broken.

"I can't say anything," he murmured from white lips. "I'm too hurt."

Colonel Gus B. Appelman, Tacoma Chamber of Commerce official and close friend of the Mattsons in Park Corporation, also emerged from the tragedy-shadowed home with this statement:

"Dr. Mattson is stunned; he can't realize yet what has happened."

That was in spite of efforts of the surgeon's friends and officers to prepare him and his family during the past few days for a tragic climax to the mystery.

WIFE IN COLLAPSE

Mrs. Mattson was under the care of a physician. She collapsed when Dr. Mattson told her "Charles never will return," and has been in a semi-coma since. The attending physician expressed grave fears for her.

Charles' 14-year-old sister Muriel, her eyes red from weeping, was trying to carry on in place of her mother. She answered the door as sympathetic friends called, and did her best to replace her stricken mother as the guiding hand of the home.

The other child of the family, William, Jr., 16, straightened his shoulders and acted for his father. He answered phones at the home. Tragedy had driven away his boyhood.

Muriel, the older boy and Virginia Chatfield, a 16-year-old friend from Seattle, were with Charles when the desperado, his eyes wild, mumbling something about "money in this house," ran out into a freezing night with Charles.

15 DAYS OF TORTURE

There followed 15 days of torture before the body was found yesterday.

Paul H. Sceva, an official of the Rainier Park Corporation, close friend of Dr. Mattson, made positive identification of the body and later revealed he had tried to act as intermediary and pay the $28,000 ransom—and further that the heartless slayer apparently intended to collect the ransom after he had killed his helpless little victim.

Sceva also said the ransom was not paid. Further he revealed that Dr. Mattson had received "several notes which he believed to be from the kidnaper. They were in the same off-color ink and printed on a toy typewriter similar to the one with which the original kidnap note was written.

INSANE INSTRUCTIONS

"I tried my best," said Sceva, "to pay the ransom, but the notes from the kidnaper, after he disappeared with Charles, contained such vague and elusive instructions that I couldn't make much out of them.

"However, the abductor, judging from the conditions of Charles' body, continued to send notes after he had killed the boy. He apparently was willing to take the money then, and I tried to pay him, but couldn't follow his insane instructions."

The trend of the case was clearly told in the "Mable-Ann" ads which ran in a Seattle afternoon newspaper from the day following the abduction until the body was found—the last ad, portraying the pessimism felt by the surgeon and emerged from the tragedy-shadowed home with this statement:

Paul Sceva, Dr. Mattson's representative in the case, praised William and Muriel as "bricks."

With his son's fate determined, the doctor collapsed and nurses attended him.

Lieutenant-Colonel Gus B. Appelman, intimate of the family, carried the tidings to the mother.

"I know what you are going to say, Gus," she said, fighting to control herself.

When Dr. Mattson came home, he thrrew himself into her arms and sobbed. Both, friends said, virtually collapsed.

CHILDREN CARRY ON

But William and Muriel carried on and today they answered the door and turned away all callers except a few very close friends.

FOUND BY BOY HUNTER

The body was found, nude and frozen, with the head crushed and the face horribly beaten, in a shallow, natural depression under a clump of fir trees. The spot was six miles south of Everett, about 150 feet off the graveled Edmonds-Park highway, which parallels the Pacific highway, main north and south artery on the Northwest coast.

The crime, horribly like the Lindbergh kidnap-murder, was revealed by Gordan Morrow, 19, who lives nearby. He was returning from rabbit hunting and stumbled over the body.

He ran to his father and shouted:

"I've found a body I think it Charles Mattson."

He was tragically right.

FATHER VIEWS SPOT

First identification was made by James Gowdy, Everett businessman and second cousin of Charles. This was verified shortly by Sceva.

Racing from Tacoma, Dr. Mattson arrived as an ambulance was departing with his son for his home city.

His glasses spattered with tears, His eyes red and his face pathetically haggard, the physician looked at the spot where the body was found. He did not get out of his car, but gazed at the snow for a few minutes, turned his car and drove away.

"I can't talk," Dr. Mattson said hoarsely.

GRIM, IRONIC NOTE

It was a grim, ironic note that even as his little boy's battered body was found in the woods near here, the last appeal of the father was still running in the personal columns of the Seattle newspaper designated in the ransom note. It read:

"Mable: We are still waiting All arrangements have been carried out in accordance with instructions contained in notes received. Be certain to give me information so that I may guard against imposters and hi-jackers, and be more specific in your instructions.

"In view of lapse of time, also desire proof my son is alive and well. Ann."

MATTSONS COLLAPSE

Children Comfort Parents

Tacoma, Wash., Jan. 12 (AP)—The snow-covered home of Dr. W. W. Mattson was a house of sorrow today.

Grief-stricken over the death of Charles Mattson, 10, a kidnaper's victim, his parents turned to their two remaining children, William, 16, and Muriel, 14, for comfort.

Dr. Mattson, stiff-lipped during the trying days when he negotiated with the kidnaper, broke first as the news came the boy's frozen body had been found in a thicket.

MOTHER BRAVE

Mrs. Mattson, convinced a week ago she would never see her young-est child agave again, withstood the final shock better than her husband.

With his son's fate determined, the doctor collapsed and nurses attended him.

Lieutenant-Colonel Gus B. Appelman, intimate of the family, carried the tidings to the mother.

"I know what you are going to say, Gus," she said, fighting to control herself.

When Dr. Mattson came home, he thrrew himself into her arms and sobbed. Both, friends said, virtually collapsed.

CHILDREN CARRY ON

But William and Muriel carried on and today they answered the door and turned away all callers except a few very close friends.

$10,000 U.S. Reward In Mattson Case 5th Since 1934

Washington, Jan. 12 (AP)—Attorney General Cummings said today the $10,000 offered by the government in the Mattson kidnap case became the fifth federal reward posted since congress authorized such offers in June, 1934.

Previous rewards: John Tolliger, capture, $10,000, information leading to his arrest, $5,000; "Baby Face" Nelson, capture, $5,000, information leading to arrest, $2,500; Alvin Karpis, information, $5,000; Harry Campbell, information, $2,500.

Justice department officials said that since they offered the $5,000 for capture of "Baby Face" Nelson, they have put up rewards only for information leading to arrests.

Theydid this, they said, to encourage amateur detectives, criminals and officers to turn information over to federal agents rather than attempt to make captures themselves.

Farley Thanks Marshal Murphy

United States Marshal John J. Murphy today received a letter from James A. Farley, chairman Democratic national committee, thanking him for his work in the presidential campaign.

Murphy also received a special invitation to attend the inauguration exercises in Washington Wednesday, January 20, signed by Cary T. Grayson, chairman of the inaugural committee.

SWARTHY MAN, 45, SLAYER OF BOY, 10

Tacoma, Wash., Jan. 12 (AP)—Hundreds of officers from every available law enforcement agency hunted a swarthy man of medium height throughout Washington state today as the kidnaper-killer of Charles Mattson.

The hunt was based on the description of the trio who saw him snatch the 10-year-old boy from his home December 27—Charles' brother, William, 16; sister, Muriel, 14; her chum, Virginia Chatfield, 15, Seattle.

KIDNAPER 45

Here are the facts of the hunt:

Hunted: A man about 45 years old, 5 feet 7 or 8 inches tall, weighing 145 pounds, swarthy complexion, possibly left handed.

At the time of the kidnaping he had several days' growth of beard, wore dark trousers, blue slide-fastener jacket, light tan checked cap, carried blue steel pistol.

Hunters: Are kidnaper-trackers of the Federal Bureau of Investigation; probably postoffice inspectors since use of the mails was reported in negotiating for $28,000 ransom; the Washington State Patrol (police); sheriffs and deputies of 39 counties; metropolitan, small city and town police throughout the state. Officers of adjacent states.

WILD COUNTRY FOR HUNT

Scene of the hunt: Washington State—69,127 square miles of cities, farms, logged-over lands, dense forests, swamps, islands, sagebrush "sad-lands" and trackless wilderness of two great mountain ranges—the Cascades and Olympics.

Bounding the state on the south is Oregon, on the east Idaho and on the north British Columbia with similar terrain.

Authentic Story of Boy's Kidnap

(Editor's note—Following is the authentic story of the Mattson kidnap-murder told for the first time exclusively to International News Service by Colonel Gus B. Appelman, close friend of Dr. W. W. Mattson, father of the slain Charles. Colonel Appelman is the only person except Dr. Mattson and the G-men who knows all details of the tragic case.)

By COL. GUS. B. APPELMAN
As Told to International News Service
Copyright, 1937, by International News Service

Tacoma, Wash., Jan. 12 (INS)—Mrs. Appelman and I were the last persons to see and talk to Charles Mattson before he was kidnaped, with the exception of the three children with whom he was playing.

We told Dr. and Mrs. Mattson we could look in on the children, Charles' brother, Bill, 16; his sister, Muriel, 14, and their 15-year-old friend from Seattle, Virginia Chatfield.

The Mattsons were at a reception. At Billy's (Dr. Mattson's) home we found the three children popping corn, drinking root beer, all very gay and carefree.

Charles climbed up on my knee. He was a sweet, smiling, lovable boy. He had come from his bath about a half hour previously and was dressed in a blue zipper jacket, blue jeans and fur-lined moccasins.

Charles had a little dictionary and we laughed as he pointed out various words and asked me their meanings, which I made up ridiculously to promote his laughter.

When Mrs. Appelman and I left, there was nothing to indicate the tragedy which so shortly befell Charles. The children were playing merrily in the living room and popping their corn in the kitchen.

Charles saw the kidnaper first. The boy ran in from the kitchen and told the other children he had seen a man through the window. The children laughed at him.

Crash of Glass

Shortly thereafter there came a crash of glass from the French doors that lead from the dining room to the patio. A masked man knocked out four panes of glass with the butt of his gun, which he held in his left hand, he tried to push through the opening but it wasn't large enough.

He menaced the frightened children with his gun and said:

"Open this door or I'll kill all of you."

Charles stepped forward and unlocked and opened the door. He let his own murdered self into the house. But it was not because he was afraid, for he stepped back and bravely faced the intruder.

The man, masked and still swinging his gun around at the children, walked swiftly in where Bill was standing by the radio.

"Got any money?" he asked Bill but did not wait for a reply, and frisked Bill, patting his pockets without finding anything.

Then he did the same to Charles, straightened up and looked around at the children. His mask slipped down, revealing a black beard. He shoved it back up.

Charles had sidled around in a door and suddenly ran, calling back:

"I'll get my air rifle."

He meant his gun upstairs and get his little gun and drive the intruder from the house.

One of the other children, however, called to Charles:

"There's no use of that, come act back," and the boy returned to boldly face the desperado again.

The intruder pulled Charles around behind him and pushed him with one hand while he still faced the other children with his gun. The man backed toward the French doors, pushing Charles with the hand behind his back.

Charles did not resist, nor cry out, but walked toward the doors. He went out into the night, through those doors in his flannel shirt, blue slippers flapping, his brown hair blown by a freezing wind. He seemed to go rather willingly. The man did not have to push him much.

I think the boy, in a manly way some boys have, decided he would go rather than have one of the other children taken. Or perhaps he just wasn't afraid and went along not fearing, or maybe not realizing what danger was before him. At any rate, he went, and that kidnaper and murderer took one of the sweetest children on earth to his death.

As the masked man was backing out of the door, he tossed a note—the ransom note demanding $28,000 —into the room and said:

"If any of you call the police, I'll kill you."

And then he and Charles disappeared.

The other children called Dr. and Mrs. Mattson. I was called, too. As soon as I heard what had happened I decided a madman had taken Charles, and I searched the grounds of the home and the woods along prairie shores of Puget Sound.

I thought the maniac would kill Charles and I was looking for his body even then, although I did not tell Billy and his wife know what I feared.

I have felt from the first that Charles never would be returned alive.

I believe the boy died from exposure in the very cold weather we have been having over the state of Washington. I think he died while his abductor was trying to collect the ransom, probably last Thursday, and that the fiend who had him then, hunted in his head, stripped him and tossed him into the snow in the belief his body might not be found for months, giving the slayer time to make an escape.

I know Dr. Mattson was very hopeful and expected his son to be returned until a week ago last Sunday. Billy (Dr. Mattson) displayed a cheerfulness that indicated he thought he was in contact with the abductor and that Charles was all right—until that Sunday.

After that he was depressed. Perhaps the boy was seriously ill then, and the kidnaper broke off contact with Billy. Perhaps the boy then died.

The G-men took active charge of the case. Billy has no complaint to make against the way they have handled it, even in view of the tragic outcome. He thinks the Federal men, all the other officers and the press have cooperated in his opinion, he feels everything was done that was possible, but it wasn't possible to do enough.

G-Men Take Charge

As I said, the G-men took complete charge of the case. They intercepted my mail, Dr. Mattson's mail and the mail of a man who was mentioned as a possible intermediary.

I hope to get some of my mail back now. The federal men, fine investigators, received the notes that were addressed to Dr. Mattson by the supposed kidnaper. They told the doctor, of course, what was in them, but I don't think he ever saw them. The G-men just handled all of the mail.

They put the ads in the paper (the Seattle paper in which the famous "Mable-Ann" series of ads appeared) and I don't think Dr. Mattson knew about the ads until they appeared.

The federal agents completely took over the case and Dr. Mattson was just an onlooker. He received no mail, and didn't know what efforts were being made to contact the kidnaper, or pay the ransom, or effect the release of the boy.

AS I SEE IT

By DAMON RUNYON

(Copyright, 1937, by King Features Syndicate, Inc., International copyright and all other rights reserved.)

MIAMI BEACH, Fla., Jan. 12—A fellow was telling us the other day that the new governor of our Florida peninsula eats peas with a knife, and assassinates the King's English.

DAMON RUNYON

Our informant is a "Cracker," or a native of these parts. He is well acquainted with the new governor, the Hon. Fred O. Cone, who is also rated a "Cracker."

But, if the information is correct, we mistrust the authenticity of the gubernatorial manifestations. We suspect that they are merely part of the Florida political technique.

In the first place, the new governor of Florida is plenty old enough to know that it is no longer necessary to eat peas with a knife. You mix 'em with mashed potatoes and use a table spoon.

The knife has been frowned on in the best eating circles of Palm Beach as an instrument for packing in peas, since the night a large pea rolled off Colonel Bradley's blade and wounded his left big toe. The knife remains au fait in Palm Beach, however, for pie.

In the second place, Governor Cone is a lawyer by trade, and a country banker, too, and you can bet all the grapefruit in Dade County that a man who has had to pass a bar examination, and to learn how to tell a customer to kindly cut down that principal can take the King's English and make it throw semicolons and syntaxes without half trying.

Hero Suffers in the Wicked City

Another thing that causes us to suspect that the new governor's reputed attributes are just so much political put-on is an experience we had down here some years ago, when we heard a famous Florida statesman make a speech to a collection of his fellow "Crackers" at a wide place in the road.

"Up thar in Jacksonville," said the statesman, "they poke fun at me becuz ah eats with mah knife. O' cou'se ah eats with mah knife—don't you?"

Well, it seems that o' cou'se they did, at that, and they could at once understand the persecution suffered by their hero in the wicked city of Jacksonville, and vote accordingly.

We were a little indignant ourself toward the Jacksonvillians for making light of a good man's small shortcoming until we discovered that the statesman, out of political character, is so well versed in the uses and purposes of tableware that he never even has to sneak a peek at his neighbor to see which instrument he is to employ to spear his salad. In other words, a master mind.

Moreover, in ordinary conversation he speaks English very prettily, and never lapses into dialect except when he is cussing. It is much handier to cuss in dialect than in good English. But, everybody knows that.

Plea for Honest-Knife-Eater

You can see from what our informant has told us of Governor Cone, and from what we heard with our own ears, that in some sets eating with a knife is accounted one of the manlier arts down here. We want it understood that we are not opposed to it as an art.

As a matter of fact, we deem eating with a knife a most crafty maneuver, requiring some little skill and science. We are opposed to it only as a political vote, and a vote-getter. A good, honest eater-with-a-knife is all right. It is those charlatans who are, at heart, fork eaters, and flourish knives in gustatory exercise merely for political veneer, who should be run out of office.

It may be that we misjudge our new governor when we say we do not believe the yarn that he eats with his knife. But he will have to furnish us with an ocular demonstration as a convincer. It sounds like propaganda to us.

As for his handling of the King's English, we commend his address to his Legislature to the governors of these United States. You could turn the text into the lingo of King Lardner's bunker, and it would remain as understandable and as sound as a nut. Our Governor Cone preaches the gospel of state economy, a welcome sermon in any manner of expression, even if you don't mean it.

Knocks Off Few Years for Economy

Governor Cone says he is 63 years old. His admirers say he has knocked off about four years, possibly in the interests of economy. He is a big man, physically, but hasn't been any too well lately.

He was born in South Georgia, and raised up around Lake City, Florida, which makes him strictly "Cracker." He is a Baptist. He hasn't any considerable means of his own. He will get $8500 per year for the next four years as governor, with some living expenses thrown in.

He was one of a field of 11 candidates for the job. He ran second in the first primary to a gentleman named Raleigh Pettaway, then beat Pettaway in the run-off. He succeeds the pudgy Dave Sholtz, an ex-Brooklynite, who has become grand exalted ruler of the Elks, and opened an office at Jacksonville.

Some say Sholtz was a good governor. Others say no. It depends on who you are talking to. Anyway, Governor Cone has no use for Sholtz, or any of his policies, and will sweep out all the Sholtz disciples as soon as he can.

Takes His Dram When He Feels Like It

Our new governor takes a dram of liquor when he feels like it. He loves to tell jokes. He is friendly and generally affable. He has been married three times.

He is raising Cain with the hookmakers in the Miami area through the sheriff, claiming they keep business away from the race tracks, and thus deprive the state of taxes from the legalized racing game, which is a frank way of putting it, to say the least.

But, it is said the new governor isn't bitterly opposed to gambling as a general proposition, which ought to give some cheer to the lads who have opened expensive joints in South Florida, and have been standing around wondering what's going to happen.

It is understood that Governor Cone is for the Florida Canal, and takes no stock in the suggestion that it would throttle the water supply of the lower end of the state.

He is a convincing speaker, though not oratorical. He knows how to talk to the folks at the forks of the creek, which is what counts down here.

He thinks the former state administration spent altogether too much money, which is what a current administration always thinks of its predecessor, and generally rightly, at that.

Governor Cone's friends say he starts out 100 per cent sincere in his purpose to cut down expenses, and save money to the taxpayers.

They hope he remains that way.

'Get Him!' President Orders G-Men

(Picture from International News Photograph Service)

Declaring that the nation has been shocked by the ghastly murder of 10-year-old Charles Mattson, President Roosevelt orders every government law agency to assist in the hunt for the perpetrators of the crime.

Think Abductor Insane

'Devil's Isle' Folk Quizzed by G-Men

San Francisco, Jan. 12 (AP)—Kidnapers imprisoned at Alcatraz believe the abductor of Charles Mattson was insane.

"They believe that, though they don't know all the details of the case," disclosed Albert Best, alias "Dr." Albert Stanley Fortune.

Best, who was taken into custody yesterday by San Francisco police on theft and check charges immediately after his release from the island prison in San Francisco bay, said federal agents had questioned the Alcatraz kidnapers about the Mattson case.

Kidnapers on the "rock," inmate Harmon W. Waley, serving a years for the seizing of George Weyerhaeuser, another Tacoma boy, nearly two years ago.

$28,000 "Nutty"

"Waley and the rest of the snatchers over there," Best said, "believe this new kidnaping was the work of a nut, or fanatic. They think the $28,000 he demanded was a nutty figure. They would have asked $30,000, $50,000 or some round amount, not 28 grand."

Waley demanded and got $200,000 for the Weyerhaeuser boy, but the ransom was almost entirely recovered.

Best, transferred from Columbus, Ohio, to complete an automobile theft sentence on the island, said kidnapers at Alcatraz are treated just like the other inmates—"all just alike."

No Cash Clue To Kidnap Murderer

Tacoma, Wash., Jan. 12 (AP)—The men tracking the murderer of Charles Mattson will not have the assistance of the most important clue in the kidnap-murder of Charles Augustus Lindbergh, Jr.—ransom money.

Lindbergh paid $50,000 ransom, not knowing his son already had been killed.

Two and one-half years later Bruno Hauptmann was arrested after he had given one of the ransom bills to a filling station attendant. More bills were secreted in his house.

But Dr. W. W. Mattson was unable to pay the $28,000 ransom demanded by the kidnaper of his son. Consequently, there are no banknotes to trace.

Kidnap 'Tip' Mailed in Brooklyn

New York, Jan. 12 (INS)—A plain postcard received at the New York Evening Journal office today before the following typewritten notation:

"Try address Watson No. 11, Tacoma, Wash.

"For Mattison kidnaper."

The card, unsigned, was posted at 11:30 last night in Brooklyn.

Here Are Few Clues Left by Kidnaper

Tacoma, Wash., Jan. 12 (INS)—The black-bearded kidnaper who ruthlessly murdered his 10-year-old victim, Charles Mattson, left behind him a tell-tale trail of clues which will ultimately lead to his capture.

They are:

The fire track made by the kidnaper's car in the woods where the body was found.

Fingerprints on the ransom note.

Blue clay clinging to the frozen fingers and face of the boy's body.

A description of the slayer's car from several persons who saw him drive from the spot where the body was discovered.

Ace Manhunter Of G-Men Leads Slaying Hunt

Washington, Jan. 12 (AP)—Herold Nathan, in charge of federal agents working on the Mattson kidnap-killing at Tacoma, Wash., ranks as one of the Justice department's ace man-hunters.

Born on the east side of New York, more than a half century ago, he has participated in more than a score of kidnaping investigations including those of Charles F. Urschel of Oklahoma and little George Weyerhaeuser of Tacoma.

Nathan, assistant director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, was assigned by J. Edgar Hoover to the Mattson case January 3 when Justice agents officially entered the search.

He is widely credited with co-ordinating the pursuit through 16 states of George "Machine Gun" Kelly and Harvey Bailey of the Urschel kidnap gang.

Nathan is studious in appearance, and when he called on Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh after the abduction of their baby in 1932, many persons erroneously believed him to be a clergyman.

Maine Bill to Ban Zoos on Highways

Augusta, Me., Jan. 12 (AP)—The exhibition of wild animals in small cages along Maine highways would be prohibited under a bill George J. Stobie, state fish and game commissioner, said today he was presenting for the Maine Legislature.

The proposal was the result of an accident in Ellsworth a few months ago when two men at a roadside stand were clawed to death as they attempted to feed a black bear.

ROOSEVELT ORDERS ARREST MADE 'IN GHASTLY CRIME'

the nation. Every means at our command must be enlisted to capture and punish the perpetrator of this ghastly crime.

"Attorney-General Cummings informs me that he has offered a reward for information leading to the arrest of the criminal; and that the special agents of the federal bureau of investigation of the Department of Justice are engaged in a search which will be pursued relentlessly and will not be terminated until the murderer is caught.

"I bespeak for the agents of the Department of Justice the continued and whole-hearted cooperation of the local police and all other law enforcement agents in this necessary work.

"A crime of this kind is renewed evidence of the need of sustained effort in dealing with the criminal menace."

White House officials said the President was informed shortly before dinner last night of the finding of the child's body.

They said he remained silent for several minutes before describing it as unbelievable and ghastly.

Meanwhile, Mrs. Roosevelt had heard the same report, and expressed to the President a hope it was not true.

Early ascertained the body had been positively identified. The President immediately called Cummings, who said today:

"All the facilities at the disposal of the Department of Justice have been turned loose upon this case. We propose to follow it to the end."

Cummings said the reward would be given for information furnished to a representative of the Bureau of Investigation and "leading to the identification and apprehension of the criminal."

Local police and other law enforcement agencies were "working in close co-operation with us," Cummings said.

The Attorney-General added that he was "desperately sorry for the stricken family."

'Horrified'

Washington, Jan. 12 (INS)—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt made a one sentence comment today on the kidnaping and murder of little Charles Mattson:

"One is horrified that there can be people in the world who can be so brutal."

Bureau Starts Work on Case

Washington, Jan. 12 (US)—All the resources of the famed bureau of investigation in the Department of Justice were flung into action the moment word was flashed from Tacoma, Wash., that the kidnaped Charles Mattson had been found, murdered.

J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the G-men, was at South Bend, Ind., where he made an address before Notre Dame University students earlier in the day, but the tragic news was relayed to him at once.

While attaches of his office professed not to know his plans, it was assumed at the Department of Justice he would fly to the Pacific Northwest from Chicago, the nearest point at which he could catch a Transcontinental plane.

It was taken for granted Hoover would assume personal charge of the hunt for the kidnaper and slayer.

At the Bureau of Investigation, it was indicated, despite the silence of officials, that Hoover had given some hurried instructions and had called the kidnap headquarters set up at Tacoma the day the Mattson boy was seized in his home and carried away by a bearded man.

K'OWS WHAT TO DO

But no instructions were necessary—here or at Tacoma, it was pointed out.

The G-men have been trained for just a contingency, and they know what to do.

Now that there no longer was need to hold back, to allow the boy's physician-father to continue his pathetic attempts to placate his abductor and pay him the ransom the search was on.

Just as agents on the scene were rushing from Tacoma to Everett, 70 miles to the north, as agents here were moving into less dramatic but none the less vital action.

Bureau of investigation officers all over the country were notified to watch out for the abductor-killer—more than a routine precaution, since the hunted man might be far away by now.

OTHER AGENTS DUE

Finger print experts and laboratory men in the closed-sealed interior precincts of the headquarters here were busy.

It was indicated other agents would fly to Seattle to join the search centering for the moment between Tacoma, to the south, and Everett, to the north.

If reliable footprints have been found near the boy's body before persons other than local police reached the scenes—as dispatches reported—the G-men will have something vital to go on.

It also is believed here some fingerprints were obtained about the Mattson home, overlooking Commencement Bay, Tacoma.

"Another Lindbergh case," was the terse comment as G-men at the Department of Justice went to work at the tasks assigned them.

THEY'LL GET HIM

The vast resources of the central Bureau of Investigation here will be pounded to the bottom and every scrap of evidence gathered on the scene will be tested.

Whether the murderer is a criminal or a madman, he will not escape, in the view of official Washington.

On Capitol Hill and in the downtown government departments, officials and attaches read late editions of the newspapers with horrified murmurs and in nearly every instance added:

"They'll get him."

Observers pointed out that in the Mattson abduction the G-men have much more to go on than in the Lindbergh tragedy, when ended in the execution of Bruno Richard Hauptmann.

New War Threat in China

Peiping, Jan. 12 (INS)—With concentration of 75,000 Japanese and pro-Japanese troops north of the great wall, a new war threat arose today in Suiyuan Province, according to Chinese accounts from Kalgan.

Abductor Sought Ransom After Boy's Murder

(Copyright, 1937, by Hearst Special Features.)

Tacoma, Wash., Jan. 12 (US)—Little Charles Mattson was already cruelly murdered when his kidnaper made his last efforts to collect the demanded $28,000 ransom, is the belief of Dr. W. W. Mattson, the boy's grief-stricken father.

Dr. Mattson, near collapse after his grim journey to identify the mutilated, nude and frozen body of his little son, today revealed details of his frantic efforts to buy the release of the boy.

MADE THROUGH FRIEND

The father's statement was made through his close friend, Paul H. Seeva, who was among the first to identify the body.

Dr. Seeva quoted Dr. Mattson thus:

"I made every effort humanly possible to pay the $28,000 ransom demanded by the kidnaper, but all negotiations failed.

"I know I was in contact with the kidnaper, and tried to follow his instructions to go through with the payment, but he was so evasive and the instructions were so confusing that it was not possible.

"I received three communications from the kidnaper, by note and telephone. But they didn't add up right.

VEERED AWAY

"All the time the man seemed to be advancing and retreating, like a fish grabbing at bait, and then veering away.

"It was evident to me and to all who saw the body of my son that he had been dead for some time when his body was found.

"I am convinced that my boy was already dead when his murderer was still making efforts to collect the money."

Directs Hunt

J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the nation's G-Men, as he arrived in Chicago and expressed belief two men killed boy.

Girl Sketches Fiend Killer

This fiend slayer was the object of a nation's search today. His face was sketched by Virginia Chatfield, playmate of Charles Mattson when he was kidnaped from his home. Virginia's sketch is expected to aid greatly the men hunting the kidnaper-murderer.

Virginia Chatfield, witness of the kidnaping of Charles Mattson in Tacoma, is a major figure in the hunt for the murderer. She has given detailed descriptions of the kidnaper.

G-Man Chief Busy

2 Men Took Boy, Asserts Hoover

Chicago, Jan. 12 (US)—Undecided whether to fly to Tacoma to take personal charge of the hunt for Charles Mattson's slayers, Chief J. Edgar Hoover of the "G-Men" pledged here that the full might and skill of the Department of Justice would be utilized to solve the crime.

Arriving here, after delivering an address at Notre Dame University, Hoover was met by D. M. Ladd, local head of the Bureau of Investigation.

They went at once to Ladd's office to get in touch anew with the big force of agents who are trailing the criminals in the West.

"WILL SOLVE IT"

Hoover said:

"I've been in contact with the men in Washington. I am confident the crime will be solved. Every resource at our command will be thrown into the search.

"We already have an extra large concentration of agents in the Pacific Northwest, and, in all probability, more men will be assigned there."

Hoover's tense attitude, and that of his staff made it manifest that the Department of Justice looks upon this latest outrage as another Lindbergh case, and that the same relentless determination and infinite patience will characterize the hunt.

TWO-MAN JOB

Hoover expressed doubt that the kidnaping was a one-man job, and said he was inclined that two men, both of cruel nature, are to blame.

In his address at Notre Dame, Hoover told 5000 students that crime-controlled municipal governments and loosely-managed prisons are major causes of widespread crime in the United States.

He urged that college graduates become "active volunteers to work in the ranks of clean politics and to build solid ground upon the swamps of distrust."

Kidnap History:

'Snatch' Weirdest Of All Crimes

Tacoma, Jan. 12 (US)—On Sunday night, two days after Christmas, four children, still under the spell of Santa Claus, were sitting in the living room of the Tacoma, Wash., home of Dr. and Mrs. W. W. Mattson.

A large lighted tree threw its yellow glow into the room from the lawn. Tired, after a day's romp, they sat about eating popcorn they had fixed themselves and drinking root beer.

Their parents were out making calls.

Charles Mattson, 10, known to his friends as Chuck, went to the window to replenish the glasses. When he came back he said:

"I saw a man looking in the window."

William Mattson, 16, and Muriel Mattson, 14, laughed at him, as did Virginia Chatfield, a friend of Virginia Chatfield, a friend of Virginia's who was visiting them. William said:

"It was probably just a shadow."

The presence was hardly mentioned before the children saw a figure through the glass-paned door. Then a hand rapped on the pane, and above that was a face, pasty, hidden behind a dark handkerchief.

The hand remained through the glass and a voice with no face demanded of a Mattson servant:

"Unlock this door quick. If you don't I'll shoot."

Virginia Chatfield quickly opposite the door, crossed the room and opened it.

Little Chuck, the girls say, started to go up stairs to get his new Christmas six gun to defend the house from the intruder. The girls persuaded him not to.

The gangster, waving his gun around the room menacingly, and then searched William's bathrobe pockets. He found only a penknife, but did not bother the girls. William said answering the man's gruff demand:

"We haven't any money. We keep it in the bank."

'This Is Funny'

The stranger said:

"Well, this is funny to me."

Then he took hold of Chuck's arm, saying:

"I want you to come with me right away. You're worth money."

To the others he said, as Chuck offered a resistance of sorts:

"I've got a lot of money in this house, and I want to get some of it back."

He started for the door, then turned Chuck up. As he did this, the two children saw the man's face. It was a dark, swarthy face. Under the mask was a dark beard. The nose was hooked.

He called attention to his pistol, which he said was of .38 calibre, and added:

"Don't you kids try to start anything because I have a bullet-proof vest on. Don't call the police or you'll be sorry."

Then he fumbled in his pocket, extracted a small piece of paper, a ransom note, and threw it on the floor.

Chuck did not say a word or make any noise. He sobbed quietly in the man's arms as the stranger walked through the door and down a 300-foot slope towards Puget Sound.

The children thought they heard him start a car on a paved road at the foot of the embankment.

To the Mattsons, Tacoma and the G-Men, the kidnaping seemed unreal. Backed by the Lindbergh law, the federal agents have broken up six kidnaping gangs.

Their record of arrests was an impressive one, though one man would have to endeavor to arrest "snatch."

But the crime committed just two blocks from Haddaway Hall, the large Westminster school where the 4-H gang got away with stealing George, demanding a $200,000 ransom.

The gang—William Mahan and Harmon and Margaret Waley—were captured by agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Young William Mattson rallied the police as soon as the man disappeared, who were expected to find some of those in the Waley-Mahan kidnaping, got to town immediately. Police headquarters, quarters of the F. B. I., U. S. Secret Service, U. S. Division of Narcotics, Tacoma city police and Pierce county officers on duty with the Mattsons.

But the man hunt, everyone was told, must not interfere with the safe return of the child. The orders were:

"Get the child first, the kidnaper after that."

The exact contents of the ransom note were not at once made public, but it was known the kidnaper demanded $28,000.

Police said, too, the message was printed as though with a crude pen and that it had in it many errors in spelling.

One thing about the note caught the attention of the investigators immediately. It was old, and crumpled—fairly as though carried about for some time. Moreover, in it there was nothing referring directly to Chuck or the Mattson family. It might have been used on any "snatch" job without changing a word.

The Mattson home, a $50,000 affair, is in the most desirable residential section in Tacoma, known as the Point Defiance section. Any house in that neighborhood might have been the object of the kidnaper, police believe.

Just who he picked out the Mattsons as a target, or why he picked Chuck of all children to snatch from the Mattson home, the suspects are at a loss to understand. It was generally known among Tacomans that the Mattsons were well-to-do, but not wealthy.

Little authentic news of what actually went on in the Mattson home has been made available to the press. The G-men maintained their traditional silence. Police Chief Baird talked but little and only to contradict rumors that are brought to him, the family kept silent.

The day after the abduction, the personal columns of the Seattle papers carried the notice:

"Mabel, what is your new address? Ann."

Immediately this was seized as a

WHAT YOU SHOULD KNOW ABOUT FACE PIMPLES

These disfiguring little spots often result from a slight, temporary disturbance, or merely from incorrect cleansing, or sometimes they are more persistent due to deeper internal causes.

While properly treating the underlying cause, you can relieve the itchy, burning soreness and help your skin by using an ointment that will keep the medication in contact with the pimply spots. Apply it every night and leave it on all night. It does a world of good.

For more than 40 years people have used Resinol Ointment to fill this need. It relieves the irritation and aids healing. It also treats the oil pores where many surface pimples start. Washing first with Resinol Soap augments the pleasing results.

Buy a jar of Resinol Ointment and cake of Resinol Soap from any druggist. For free sample write Resinol, Dept. 39, Baltimore, Md.

Washington Plans $5000 Reward

Olympia, Wash., Jan. 12 (INS)—A Bill raising for a $5000 reward for arrest of the slayer of Charles Mattson was to be introduced in the State Senate today.

Lieutenant-Governor Victor A. Meyers said a canvass showed all members apparently favorable. The bill would provide a legislative committee to decide who was entitled to share in the reward.

communication directed to the kidnaper. But nobody who had seen the ransom note would discuss it, and the police have been made responsible for the paper's version of the ransom note.

The following Thursday another Mabel-Ann communication was published. This read:

"Mabel: We are ready. Everything entirely in accordance with your desires. Ann."

Exactly what this was to mean Dr. Mattson had raised the $28,000. Federal men were rallied away from his home to make contact with the kidnaper easier. The police detail was lessened. There was great activity in the residence.

Mysterious Trips

A story was circulated that the note instructed Dr. Mattson to get hold of a car of ancient vintage and that to deliver the money. When such a car appeared on the scene, it was thought the father was ready to go after his child.

Each day after the publication of the second advertisement was one of activity in and about the house, but friends in a position to know insisted that no actual contact had yet been made.

Chuck was not warmly dressed when the kidnaper carried him off. The following day the weather turned cold and it snowed. Mrs. Mattson, her friends say, constantly worried about her baby getting pneumonia or influenza. She was quoted as praying almost constantly.

"Please God, don't let him be frightened. He is so very little."

And she inserted in the paper the kidnaper evidently reads a personal column, which said:

"Please save my boy from harm. Please keep my boy warm. He has just had a severe cold."

At first it was thought the man who had been a former patient of Dr. Mattson.

He was probably doped before the kidnaping, police said. And a hazardous job, police said. But two days later they gave up that theory and began working on a new one. More and more they came to believe it was a one-man job.

In the days beginning they feared that someone better educated than the actual criminal seemed to be was the brains behind the job. But they began to doubt this as the days dragged by for the tortured parents.

New G-1 plates ordered by Governor Hurley for his car in place of the S-1 plates used by other chief executives, will be turned over to the Governor late today by Charles R. Gilley, chief clerk of the registry of motor vehicles.

According to reports on Beacon Hill, the Governor was moved to make the substitution because of the publicity given to S-1 plates during the administration of his predecessor.

Kidnap Witness Ill From Shock

Seattle, Wash., Jan. 12 (INS)—Virginia Chatfield, 15, Seattle high school girl, who witnessed the kidnaping of little Charles Mattson, two days after Christmas day, was ill today from the shock of hearing of his death.

The girl has been highly nervous since her return from Tacoma, where she visited the Mattsons. She has furnished investigators with a complete description of the man.

The move was seen as an effort to "break" the market and force a retail price cut.

The Massachusetts Milk Control Board however, stood pat on its decision to enforce the present milk price scale, which is six and a half cents a quart paid to Massachusetts farmers, and sale to consumers at 11 cents a quart in stores and 12 cents delivered.

Futile Kidnap Search

Day-by-Day Hunt for Kidnap Victim

Tacoma, Jan. 12 (US)—Here is a chronology covering the highlights in the kidnaping of 10-year-old Charles "Chuck" Mattson, and the furor of investigation which has been brought to a tragic and horrifying climax in the murder of the boy:

Sunday, Dec. 27—Charles "Chuck" Mattson, son of the socially prominent Dr. and Mrs. W. W. Mattson, is snatched from the living room of their $50,000 home in Tacoma, Wash. Two other Mattson children, William, 16, and Muriel, 14, and a juvenile friend, Virginia Chatfield, are witnesses to the crime, staging a post-Christmas party of popcorn and root beer in the luxurious living room when the kidnaper breaks in through a high French window. Dr. and Mrs. Mattson are out at the time.

Monday, Dec. 28—G-men and local police inaugurate a spectacular chase for the criminal and his innocent prey. But their clues are meagre. They have a dirty, crudely written note which the man threw on the living room floor after he has seized Charles into his arms and is preparing to flee. It demands $28,000 ransom and warns of silence under penalty of dire harm to the boy. They also have a fairly accurate description of the man looked and talked. The children had a good look at his face. They also said he spoke with some kind of accent.

Tuesday, Dec. 29—The frantic Mattson family seeks to make contact with the kidnaper. They insert a classified advertisement in the Seattle Times, presumably in accordance with instructions in the ransom note. It is the first of a series of notices to "Mable" and pleads for quick action to relieve their terrific anxiety.

Wednesday, Dec. 30—It is revealed that two previous attempts had been made to kidnap a child of George Franklin, Tacoma chain grocer and neighbor of the Mattsons.

Thursday, Dec. 31—Department of Justice men call a "truce," evidently to give the family an opportunity to negotiate with the kidnaper. A second advertisement appears in the Times, saying in effect: "We are ready."

Friday, Jan. 1—One pathetically significant reminder of the tragedy is removed. This is the beautifully decorated and lighted Christmas tree on the lawn of the Mattson home. Still no word from the kidnaper. No trace of him or of little "Chuck" has been found.

Saturday, Jan. 2—Rumors surge over the city and countryside like wildfire. Police dash madly to an abandoned poultry ranch in Thurston County, Wash. A report had come in that the boy was being held prisoner there. The search of the place is fruitless. There is no evidence that the kidnaper had been with the boy.

Sunday, Jan. 3—The G-men become impatient for action. They cast off their watchful waiting policy and gave up the search "formally." Under cover, however, they had already been active under the direction of Harold Nathan, assistant chief of the federal bureau of investigation. Every conceivable avenue which the kidnaper may have taken in his flight from the Mattson home with little "Chuck" in his arms is thoroughly scoured.

Monday, Jan. 4—Dr. Mattson, fearful for his boy's safety, begs the G-men to give him more time to negotiate with the kidnaper. A third advertisement appears in the Times, all police and federal activities in the case are reported to have been temporarily dropped. No answer comes to the advertisement.

Tuesday, Jan. 5—Another sensation is sprung in the investigation. A man is arrested at Spencer, Iowa, after he tells the police there a story of having been mistreated by gangsters at Tacoma. He also declared he saw a boy there "wrapped in a sheet." This angle, like countless others, simmers down to nothing.

Wednesday, Jan. 6—Dr. Mattson again appeals to the authorities to desist in their private surveillance of his movements while he is trying so desperately to reclaim his child.

Thursday, Jan. 7—Another "Annto-Mable" advertisement appears in the Times. It announces that the "notes" are being received, and assures "Mable" that the police are not intercepting them. It also promises that "instructions" will be carried out without anyone knowing.

Friday, Jan. 8—Wild reports are flashed throughout Tacoma and the nation that "Chuck" Mattson will soon be home, safe and sound. It is said the boy's father has paid the $28,000 ransom. A fifth message appears in the personal column.

Saturday, Jan. 9—There is evidence that Dr. Mattson actually has contacted the kidnaper. He inserts a sixth advertisement asking for "new proof" that the boy is alive. He also asks information to guard against an imposter or nlacker.

Sunday, Jan. 10—Hours pass, and hope for the safety of "Chuck" Mattson wanes. Friends of the surgeon admit he has had no assurance that his boy is alive. His demand for new proof of this, they say, has blocked payment of the ransom. Just as in the case of the Lindbergh baby, it is feared the unseen and unknown negotiator will "go" further than ransom payment may be a hoaxer. It is feared more definitely than ever that the child, like little Charles Augustus Lindbergh, Jr., may be dead.

Monday, Jan. 11—The maimed, frozen body of the kidnaped boy is found in a thicket near Everett, Wash., by a farmer boy hunting rabbits.

Finding of Body Depicted by Youth

PALED AT SIGHT OF CORPSE

The 19-year-old boy who found Charles Mattson's body tells the graphic story in the following account, written specially for Universal Service.

By GORDON MORROW

Copyright, 1937, by Universal Service.

Everett, Wash., Jan. 12 (US)—Dad didn't believe me when I ran back to the house shouting: "Dad, I've found the Mattson boy!"

But when he saw my face—I must have been white as a ghost—he knew it was true, and he grabbed me and ran back to the spot where I had stumbled over the naked body of the little boy.

RECOGNIZED BODY

I knew it was the Mattson boy the minute I looked at the body lying there in the snow. His little face all covered with dried blood and his head caved in as though he had been hit by some awfully heavy instrument.

I was out hunting rabbits. I had seen one running through the thicket and I ran from the house, and I ran back into the house to get my gun.

As I started through the woods down toward the waterfront, I stumbled over something. I had just scarce a section with which I was familiar and which is filled with clumps of underbrush.

I picked myself up and stared.

There, his feet partly covered by the snow, was the nude body of a small boy. I guess I got hysterical.

SHOCKED BY SIGHT

For nearly half a minute I just looked, my eyes popping out of my head. I couldn't think. I was so shocked.

Then I turned and ran back to the house to tell dad. I was out of breath when I got to the house and I was kind of frightened by what I saw.

Dad just looked at me hard, shaking his head as though he didn't believe me. Then suddenly he grabbed me by the arm and we raced back to the spot.

Dad spent only a very few minutes investigating before he telephoned the sheriff's office in Everett.

Then we went back to the spot in the woods and waited. Dad cautioned me to touch nothing, so that the authorities would be able to get the scene and the body just as it was when I stumbled upon it.

After wards I wanted to cry because I was pretty much upset, but I didn't. The little body was so awfully bruised. I guess I'll always be thinking of that terrible sight the rest of my life.

EXPOSED TO COLD

Whatever do you suppose made the kidnaper take away Charles' clothes when it was so cold? Maybe he wanted him to die of exposure.

That's even crueller than killing a person outright. But I guess Charles didn't die quickly enough so he beat him up terribly.

The blood was clotted all over his face, and there was a huge hole on the left side of the boy's head.

Oh, I hope they catch the man who did this terrible thing!

FUNCTIONS OF OFFICIALS

5—Placement of the more than 100 separate independent agencies, boards, administrations, authorities, corporations, committees, etc., under one or more of the 12 cabinet officers so the President may always be advised of their activities.

A proposed new department of social welfare would consolidate and co-ordinate all activities touching child welfare, relief, education, health, and recreation.

The second cabinet branch, Mr. Roosevelt suggested, would be one under all public works and engineering under a Secretary of Public Works, to be drawn from the engineers assigned to temporary peace-time duty in the new proposed department.

Congressional reaction of the President's vast proposal of Federal overhauling has been guarded. He outlines his views in advance to both Houses Sunday but what specific recommendations he actually does confirmed to the executive will be left entirely to the President, it was pointed out by Democratic leaders.

CONGRESS BATTLE LOOMS

The new twist on Civil Service and replacement of the Comptroller General were expected by many to stir up a row even in an overwhelming Democratic Congress to say nothing of the use of creating two new cabinet posts.

Also, Mr. Roosevelt probably will make no recommendation that such quasi-judicial independent agencies as the Interstate Commerce Commission, the Federal Trade Commission and the Securities and Exchange Commission be transferred under the executive departments. He says he wants them there "only for housekeeping functions" so he may, as executive, control personnel and policy.

"Modernizing White House business organization, these six advisers, being possessed of high competence, great physical vigor and a passion for anonymity," would "remain in the background, issue no orders, make no decisions, emit no public statements." They would silently keep the President advised on questions of law and federal procedure.

NEW CIVIL SERVICE

The proposal to blanket several hundred thousand unclassified government employes into civil service would be accomplished by decision of the President and Congress for a new "civil service administrator," accountable directly to the White House.

"This new civil service administrator would be himself selected on a basis of merit by examination conducted by a non-political service board of seven members appointed by the President for seven years, no more than four men and women" who have not been identified with politics for five years previous.

Suggesting that the office of comptroller-general be abolished, the report said:

"Accountability of the executive branch of the Congress has been confused and limited in the past because of the fact that the comptroller-general has endeavored to control the spending policy of the departments. This the comptroller regards as an unconstitutional usurpation of power and recommends the abolition of the office and the establishment of a new office of auditor-general to do what the comptroller was supposed but failed to do for 15 years, namely, give Congress an independent annual audit and a report on illegal transactions."

5 ROOSEVELT POINTS OF REORGANIZATION

Washington, Jan. 12 (AP) — The five-point Roosevelt reorganization program:

1—Consolidate all boards, commissions, corporations and agencies of the federal government under 12 major departments, the two new ones being social welfare and public works. Change name of interior department to "conservation."

2—Place whole government administrative service on career and merit basis by making civil service include all non-policy-determining positions under the President.

3—Make present comptroller-general office into an "auditor generalship," responsible to Congress only for post-audit of federal financial activities, and give the existent pre-audit function to treasury and judicial function to attorney-general.

4—Strengthen the budget bureau and consolidate in a national resources board the responsibility for national planning and constant research to improve government efficiency, directly under the President.

5—Give the President six executive assistants to take much work off his shoulders and act in a purely confidential capacity.

TEXT OF MESSAGE

Washington, Jan. 12 (INS)—following is the text of President Roosevelt's message, accompanying his proposals to Congress today for governmental reorganization:

To the Congress of the United States:

I address this message to the Congress as one who has had executive and as a legislator, as a subordinate in an executive department, as the chief executive of a state and now, on six occasions, as President, the constitutional responsibility for the whole of the executive branch of the government has lain for four years.

Now that we are out of the trough of the depression, the time has come to set our house in order. The administrative management of the government is overcrowding. We are confronted not alone by new activities, some of them temporary in character, but also by the growth of the work of the government matching the growth of the nation over more than a generation.

Out of Date

Except for the enactment of the Budget and Accounting act of 1921, no extensive change in management has occurred since 1913, when the department of labor was established. The executive structure of the government is sadly out of date.

I am not the first President to report to the Congress that the piecemeal machinery stands in the way of effective administration and of adequate control by the Congress. Theodore Roosevelt, William H. Taft, Woodrow Wilson and Herbert Hoover made repeated but not wholly successful efforts to deal with the problem. Committees of the Congress have also rendered distinguished service to the nation through their efforts from time to time to point the way to improvement of governmental management and organization.

The opportunity and the need for action now comes to you and to me. If we have faith in our Republican form of government, and in the ideals upon which it was rested courageously to the task of making that government efficient. The great stake in efficient democracy is the stake of the common man.

Must Serve

In these troubled years of world history, a self-government cannot long survive unless that government is an effective agency to serve mankind and carry out the will of the nation. A government without good management is a house builded on sand.

In striving together to make our government more efficient, you and I are taking part in a generation the battle to preserve that freedom of self-government which our forefathers fought to establish, and hand down to us. They struggled against tyranny, against unrepresentative controls, against government by birth, wealth or class, against nothingness.

Our struggle now is against confusion, against ineffectiveness, against waste, against inefficiency. This battle, too, must be won, unless it is I cole said that in our generation national self-government broke down and was frittered away in bad management.

Will it be said "Democracy was a great dream, but it could not do the job?" Or shall we here and now, without further delay, make it our business to see that our American democracy is made efficient so that it will do the job that is required of it by the events of our time?

Studied Problem

I know your answer; and the answer of the nation, because, after all, we are a practical people. We know good management in the home, on the farm, and in business, big and little. And if any nation can find a way to effective government it should be that American people through their own democratic institutions.

Over a year ago it seemed to me that this problem of administrative management of the executive branch of the government should be a major order of business of this session of Congress. Accordingly, after extended discussions and negotiations, I appointed a committee on administrative management, to examine the whole problem broadly and to suggest for my guidance and your consideration a comprehensive plan based upon principles for dealing with the overhead organization and management of the executive branch as it is established under the Constitution.

The committee has now completed its work, and I transmit to you its report, "Administrative Management in the Government of the United States." I have examined this report carefully and thoughtfully, and am convinced that it is a great document of permanent importance. I commend it to you also with your knowledge of government, and to the vast majority of the citizens of the country who want and believe in efficient self-government.

No important advance can be made toward the major objectives of the program without the passage by the Congress of the necessary legislation.

It will be necessary to provide for the establishment of two new departments, a department of social welfare and a department of public works, for the assignment by the President of all the miscellaneous activities to the 12 major departments thus provided, for reorganization of the Civil Service system, for modernizing and strengthening the managerial agencies of the executive, and for making the executive more strictly accountable to the Congress.

By the creation of two departments nearly 100 agencies now not under regular departments can be consolidated as to their administrative functions under a total of 12 regular departments of the government.

The remaining elements of the five-point program, though they must await your action on the basic legislation, may be initiated through appropriations and executive orders.

No Greater Power

In placing this program before you I realize that it will be said that I am recommending the increase of the powers of the presidency. This is not true. The President as established in the Constitution of the United States has all of the powers that are required. In spite of timid souls in 1787 who feared effective governments the presidency was established as a single-unified executive office in which was vested the entire executive power of the national government, even as the legislative power was placed in the Congress and the judicial in the supreme court.

What I am placing before you is not the request for more power, but for the tools of management and the authority to distribute the work so that the President can effectively discharge those powers which the constitution now places upon him. Unless we are prepared to abandon this important part of the constitution, we must equip the presidency with authority commensurate with his responsibilities under the constitution.

Can't Be Effective

The plain fact is that the present organization and equipment of the executive branch of the government refeats the constitutional intent that there be a single responsible chief executive to coordinate and manage the departments and activities in accordance with the laws enacted by the Congress. Under these conditions the government cannot be thoroughly effective in working under popular control, for the common good.

The committee does not spare the comptroller-general for the failure to give the Congress a prompt and complete audit, such as, frankly, would help the administration, as a means of holding the executive truly to account; nor for his unconstitutional assumption of executive power; nor for the failure to cap the accounting system of the government up to date to serve as the basis of information, management and control.

The committee criticises the use of boards and commissions in administration, condemns the excesses use of "corporations" as governmental instrumentalities, and points out that the practice of creating independent regulatory commissions, who perform administrative work in addition to judicial work threatens to develop a "fourth branch" of the government, for which there is no provision in the Constitution. Nor does the committee spare the inadequacy of the civil service system.

Eye on Budget

The committee on administrative management, after a careful examination of recent attempts to reorganize the government and of state reorganizations carried out so ably by Governor Frank O. Lowden in Illinois, Governor Alfred E. Smith in New York, Governor Harry F. Byrd in Virginia, Governor William Tuck of Gardiner in Maine, and by other Governors, accepts the view held by my distinguished predecessors that the detailed work of reorganization is, as President Theodore Roosevelt said, over 30 years ago, "essentially executive, in its nature"

The committee accordingly recommends that reorganization should be a continuing duty and authority of the Chief Executive on the basis of standards set by the Congress. To make this safe, the committee insists, however, that the Congress keep a watchful eye upon reorganization both through the annual budget and through the maintenance of strict executive accountability to the Congress under the independent audit of all business transactions by an auditor general.

Under the proposed plan the Congress must by law establish the major departments and determine in advance the general principles which shall guide the President in distributing the work of the executive among those departments, and in this task the President is to act on the basis of careful studies by the bureau of the budget and after conference with those primarily affected.

Mayor Points

To meet this situation and bring our administrative management up to date, the committee presents an integrated five point program which you will find set out in its report. It includes the major recommendations:

1—Expand the White House staff so that the President may have a sufficient group of able assistants in his own office to keep him in closer and easier touch with the widespread affairs of administration, and to make the speedier clearance of the knowledge needed for executive decision;

2—Strengthen and develop the managerial agencies of the government, particularly the budget, dealing with the budget and efficiency research, with personnel and with planning, as management-arms of the Chief Executive;

3—Extend the merit system upward, outward and downward to cover practically all non-policy-determining posts; reorganize the civil service system as a part of management under a single, responsible administrator, and create a citizen board to serve as the watchdog of the merit system, and increase the salaries of key posts throughout the service so that the government may attract and hold in a career service men and women of ability and character.

Merge Agencies

4—Overhaul the 100 independent agencies, administrations, authorities, boards and commissions, and place them by executive order within one or the other of the following 12 major executive departments: State, treasury, war, justice, postoffice, navy, conservation, agriculture, commerce, labor, social welfare and public works; and place upon the executive continuing responsibility for the maintenance of effective organization, and establish accountability of the executive to the Congress by providing a genuine independent research staff of best transactions by an auditor general, and restore to the executive complete responsibility for accounts and current transactions;

As you will see, this program rests solidly upon the Constitution and the American way of doing things. There is nothing in it which is revolutionary, as the phrase is drawn from our own experience either in government or large-scale business.

2 Cabinet Posts

I adorse this program and feel confident that it will commend itself to you also with your knowledge of government, and to the vast majority of the citizens of the country who want and believe in efficient self-government.

No important advance can be made toward the major objectives of the program without the passage by the Congress of the necessary legislation.

It will be necessary to provide for the establishment of two new departments, a department of social welfare and a department of public works, for the assignment by the President of all the miscellaneous activities to the 12

Constitutional

Reorganization is not a mechanical task, but a human task, because government is not a machine, but a living organism. With these clear safeguards, and in view of our past muddling with reorganization, you cannot but accept the logic and wisdom of the recommendations.

I would not have you adopt this five-point program, however, without realizing that this represents an important step in American history. If we do this, we reduce from over 100 down to a dozen the operating executive agencies of the government, and we bring many little bureaucrats under bread democratic authority.

But in so doing, we shall know that we are going further in the Constitution, and giving to the executive branch modern tools of management and the type of organization which will enable government to go forward efficiently. We can prove to the world that the American government is both democratic and effective.

In this program I invite your co-operation, and pledge myself to deal energetically and promptly with the executive responsibilities or reorganizatin and administrative management, when you shall have made this possible by the necessary legislation.

ate commissioner for demand a hearing.

"If cross that bridge[illegible] how I come to it," said Governor Hurley.

The governor also expressed informal[illegible] from Chairman Wilfred E. Calahan on the number of employees along the various lines of work in the department. According to reports, 100 were to be dropped.

STATEMENT BY GOVERNOR

Governor Hurley issued the following statement:

"A conference was held today with William F. Callahan, state commissioner of public works, and his two associate commissioners, Gen. Richard K. Hale and Frank Kane.

"At this conference I asked each commissioner to explain his present duties and knowledge of the same.

"I directed General Hale to take charge of the engineering division. Commissioner Callahan was directed to furnish within a week a complete report of the personnel of the Public Works Department.

"I do not desire the names of the employees in this report but the number holding a given position.

"Commissioner Kane upon admitting his lack of knowledge of requirements of his present position was asked by me to submit his resignation, forthwith.

AWAITING RESIGNATION

"Mr. Kane withdrew from the conference and I am awaiting his resignation.

"In my opinion the department of public works has competent engineers on its staff and the employment of outside expert engineers is unnecessary except in extreme cases. For this reason, I instructed Commissioner Hale to take charge of the engineering division.

"It has been called to my attention that this department has paid a substantial sum to Professor Charles R. Breed of M. I. T. for expert engineering advice.

"In 1935, an appropriation of $39,000 was made for a study of the Boston-Sandwich Canal. Payment of this sum was made to Mr. Breed for a period from May 27, 1935, to October 31, 1936.

"Another payment of $2958.11 was made to him in connection with this highway. He was paid from April 29, 1936, to December 26, 1936. A further payment of $3411.84 was made to him for the period from April to November, 1936, for engineering advice and a study which was made."

Governor Hurley made no reference to the salary to be paid Breed. He is understood to be a graduate of M. T.

KANE BUREAU HEAD

Frank Kane was throughout 1935 head of the then Governor Ely's special employment bureau. He hired many men who were put to work in the public works department.

During 1936 he was on the Curley secretarial staff and was appointed an associate public works commissioner.

He was first employed as a state aid just prior to his appointment as supervisor of the National Union for Social Justice. He was also active in politics in behalf of the radio priest, Father Coughlin, and Governor Lehman.

After Curley's defeat for the senate by Henry Cabot Lodge, Jr., Kane and Father Coughlin announced the telegram running him for governor by mistake.

TOMASELLO HURLEY AIDE

Frank W. Tomasello of Dorchester, assistant U. S. attorney today was named as honorary police aide, one of Governor Hurley's civilian aides, and he accepted it.

He takes the place of Dr. Carl F. Marshall of Cambridge, a veterinarian who resigned out of friendship for Joseph A. Sullivan, Boston veterinarian, who had demoted Sergeant Sullivan from the position of chief bank bandit-hog catcher. Dr. Marshall, it is officially announced today, "Dodge is a member of the Harvard Class of 1911. Curley appointed him last month.

Murdered Bride of Year

Mrs. Mary Robinson Case, 25, latest victim of a fiend slayer, was found dead in a bathtub of her New York apartment. A bride of only a year, the beautiful girl had worked as a magazine cover model.

KILLER'S HAIR LONE CLUE IN TUB SLAYING

New York, Jan. 12 (AP)—A blood-soaked strand of hair, torn from the scalp of her slayer, was the lone clue today in the brutal "bathtub murder" of Mrs. Mary Robinson Case, 25-year-old magazine cover model and bride of a year, whose bludgeoned body was found in a tub overflowing with water.

The young house-wife, a former Junior Leaguer of Lancaster, Pa., apparently had put up a violent struggle with her attacker before succumbing to the crushing blow of a ball-headed machinist's hammer.

Police sent the wisp of hair, which was found clutched in the pretty brunette victim's hand, to a laboratory for examination.

At the same time, Deputy Chief Inspector John J. Ryan, broadcast a description of a platinum wedding ring which had been wrenched from Mrs. Case's finger by the murderer.

HINTS ARREST NEAR

Theft of the ring and $15 from Mrs. Case's handbag, which was later discovered in the murder apartment incinerator, satisfied police that robbery was the ostensible motive for the crime.

The young bride, who posed for national advertising, and whose photograph appeared in many magazines, battled desperately against her assailant as evidenced by spatters of blood and overturned furniture in the living room.

Police hinted today that an arrest was imminent.

"We have a far better grip on this case than we've had on many we have cracked," said Deputy Chief Inspector Francis J. Kear.

Police began a systematic search of Harlem to locate a young negro, a former houseboy in the building, who was accused of rifling the Case apartment a year ago. He was acquitted of the charge and left his job several months ago.

The body of the victim, clad only in silk underwear and stockings, was found by her husband, Frank, 30, when he returned to his Jackson Heights apartment early last night.

Bloodstains in the kitchen gave evidence that Mrs. Case battled with her assailant, and officials suggested she possibly was slain there and her body carried to the bathroom, which also was spattered with blood. A sheet covered the tub. A rubber stopper was in the drain pipe.

KILLING SIMILAR

The slaying was similar in circumstances to the murder last April of Mrs. Nancy E. Titterton, 31-year-old writer. Mrs. Titterton was criminally attacked and strangled and her body left lying in a bathtub in her apartment.

John Fiorenza, 25-year-old upholsterer convicted of killing Mrs. Titterton, is in the death house at Sing Sing prison, awaiting execution next week.

Case, an employe of the American Hotels Association, told police he received no answer when he attempted to telephone his wife about 6 p. m. and tell her he would be detained.

TUB OVERFLOWING

Deputy Chief Inspector John J. Ryan said Case told him he left for his home, worried by the lack of response to his call. When he entered the apartment, he noticed overturned furnishings in the kitchen, and heard the bathtub overflowing.

Case just had lifted the body of his wife from the tub when John Kalby, superintendent of the (Frederick Morris) apartments (on 50th street), came in to investigate complaints of the family below that water was seeping through the ceiling.

Shaken on the door of a route to the hall and police to search the incinerator in the basement. There detectives found a bloodstained machinist's hammer, two empty pocketbooks identified as Mrs. Case's, and a worn and stained pair of trousers.

MAD SPAIN RED MOB EXECUTES 208 HOSTAGES

St. Jean de Luz, France, Jan. 12 (AP)—Mass executions on land and at sea sent a wave of terror along the warring Basque coast of Spain today.

At Bilbao, capital of the Basque regional administration supporting the Spanish Socialist government, 208 rightist hostages were reported blown to bits or hacked to death in a mad mob orgy.

At sea, said advices reaching Bayonne and Bilbao, the captain and mate of the Spanish insurgent freighter Virgin del Carmen were executed for "piracy" in connection with the killing of the crew and passengers of the government ship Guerna last Saturday.

France, Germany End Crisis Over Morocco

By the Associated Press.

France and Germany, apparently adjusting their Moroccan troubles, seemed today ready to make efforts to effect a "full and lasting settlement" of their political quarrels.

French officials were cautious. But there were indications both in Paris and in Berlin that the forthcoming Paris visit of Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, Nazi minister of economics and finance, might lead to an economic and then a political understanding between the two nations.

Fuehrer Adolf Hitler and Andre Francois-Poncet, French envoy to the third Reich, smoothed out the most troublesome Franco-German tangle over Spain with mutual assurances of respect for Spanish and Spanish Moroccan territorial integrity.

French tension took a further downward course when an imperfion of the Spanish Moroccan zone by a French general brought a report there were no sizeable German troop concentrations in sight.

The Spanish Moroccan high commissioner permitted this in assertion to prove his declarations that there was no serious Nazi incursions of the Spanish territory, now controlled by General Franco's insurgents.

REFUSE RUSSIA'S DEMAND

British officials meantime refused Russia's demands for the use of the British fleet to protect neutral shipping from blockading insurgent warships off Spain. These armed boats have seized and searched numerous Russian merchantmen.

An Italian demand for the impounding of $500,000,000 Spanish government gold deposited abroad under the auspices of Bilbao was studied by a sub-committee of the European neutrality commission.

Also studied was the latest indications that Germany would stop intervening on the side of General Francisco Franco. France found a way of keeping her Spanish border closed to volunteers going to fight on the side of the Spanish government.

BOSTON FLIERS FEARED KILLED

With their plane reported wrecked in the Illinois river, near Hennepin, Ill., two Boston National Guard fliers, engaged in a cross-country training flight, were feared to have perished today.

Believed to have been trapped and drowned in the sunken wreckage of the plane were Dr. Frank J. Otis, 30, a Boston City Hospital physician, who holds a lieutenant's commission in the

DR. FRANK J. OTIS

National Guard, and Sergeant John F. Gibbons, aerial photographer, of Natick.

Residents of Hennepin reported they saw the plane flying low over the town at 5:30 p. m., its motor sputtering and apparently in trouble. A short time later a loud splash was heard, indicating the machines had plunged into the river.

Searching parties were organized. Through the night more than 400 men were engaged in dragging the river for bodies, and searching for wreckage, but at dawn they had found no trace of either plane or bodies.

Belief that the victims were the Boston fliers was expressed after officials of airports in the midwestern area reported their machine was the only one unchecked of those known to be on its airplanes.

The pair, members of the 101st Observation Squadron, 26th Division, Massachusetts National Guard, were flying a National Guard open observation plane of the O-46A type. They had checked in at the Chicago airport and taken off again at 7:13 p. m.

The time of the reported crash was 8:30 p. m. and, since Hennepin is some 120 miles from Chicago, airport officials estimate the Boston fliers would just about reach that point in the time that elapsed.

They left Boston last Saturday to make a cross-country training flight to comply with National Guard regulation. Dr. Otis was on a month's leave from his duties at City Hospital in order to make the flight with Sergeant Gibbons as his observer.

At Chicago airport attendants said they were heading toward Moline, Ill., to visit Dr. Otis' parents. His father is a prominent Moline physician.

Their route to Moline would take them over Hennepin and should have been completed in less than two hours.

Residents of Hennepin, who reported seeing the plane in difficulties over their town furnished a description of the machine which tallied with that of the missing national guard ship.

The fact that the Illinois river at Hennepin is swollen and filled with large cakes of ice added to the alarm felt for the safety of the two fliers.

Dr. Otis has been flying for several years, and was also gaining an enviable reputation in his chosen profession, according to Dr. Lewis L. Reese, night superintendent at Boston City Hospital.

Graduating from Harvard Medical School four years ago, he had completed his internship, and within two months would have finished his special studies in the field of obstetrics.

RECALL WALLACE'S DEATH

Dr. Reese, who expressed himself as shocked at the possible fate of his confrere, described him as an excellent doctor and a popular member of the hospital.

Sergeant Gibbons is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Gibbons, of Dewey street, Natick.

Their home today, by his parents declared they had received no official word that he had perished in a plane crash and still they did would not give up hope.

Grand Jury to Get Brookline Vice Case Jan. 27

Back from a trip through New York, Governor Hurley's Executive Council Attorney Harold Smith today at Dedham courthouse began presenting evidence against Brookline's liquor case for the grand jury.

The grand jury will convene in special session tomorrow to hear testimony from Margaret Toth, 16-year-old New Jersey girl who was taken without further delay.

The girl has also pointed out certain premises where prostitution is provided, or in some cases has been able to supply dates, according to reports today.

Woman, 62, Escapes False Teeth Peril But Is Fined $50

Mrs. Lydia Embree, 62, of St. Germain street, Back Bay, probably will be glad when this week is over.

Today, in Roxbury court, she paid a fine of $50, assessed on a charge that she had number pool slips in her possession.

Yesterday the same charge was made against her, but against receiving her false teeth from her throat the charge seemed trivial.

In court today, Special Officer William Hartigan testified that when he and other members of the police special service squad raided at Mrs. Embree's home, she attempted to swallow pool slips.

The effort he said, dislodged her mobile teeth and to all concerned it was very confusing until the pool slips were dislodged from her throat.

and strikers engaged in a pitched battle.

The Governor's order followed a telephone call from State Police Commissioner Gerard G. Chaddock who recommended at least 2,000 national guardsmen be sent to Flint without further delay.

Murphy's decision followed long conversations with both strike leaders and General Motors officials.

He received from General Motors officials a promise to shut off heat and water in the plants occupied by strikers and agree not to interfere with delivery of food.

He pleaded with strike leaders to allow food, bedding and clothing.

MARCH TO AID STRIKE

Adding to tensionin were reports that motorcades of strike sympathizers were en route here from other states.

Police Chief James Wills said he anticipated that "within four or five minutes from now a motorcade of 1,000 cars" would arrive from Detroit.

Governor Murphy placed Colonel John S. Prentis in charge of the National Guard mobilization. Prentis is commander of the Grand Rapids area and made plans to move troops if necessary into Flint.

The pitched battle between about 65 policemen and several hundred strikers and sympathizers came after word was turned off in the heat and after General Motors had served notice delivering food to the 400 remaining who have been in the plants for a week.

General Motors today ordered a resumption of Flint production "as soon as possible" today in spite of the governor's order for the National Guard to intervene in Flint.

He said, while he estimated the number gathering at Grand Rapids at between 1000 and 1500.

Governor Murphy warned in a statement that "law and order must be preserved" but made it clear that "under no circumstances" will national guardsmen "take sides" in the battle between the squad of police, to six men, armed with sub-machine guns and stationed in front of the plant, while the strikers had blocked the intersection of Third and Chevrolet avenues with eight cars. The intervention is one of the only two entrances to the area.

Alfred P. Sloan, Jr., is president of the General Motors Corp. Riots broke out in the company's Flint plants last night.

"The blood spilling in Flint by hired assassins of General Motors is a demonstration of what Mr. Sloan means by collective bargaining," Martin told reporters before entering a conference with John L. Lewis, chairman of the Committee for Industrial Organization which Martin's union is affiliated.

Detroit, Jan. 12 (INS)—A new sit-down strike on a General Motors front was started today when 1700 men left a fifth assembly of Fleetwood Division, which supplies Cadillac, walked out. Fifty men sat down.

Union Chiefs Lay Riots To General Motors' Act

Washington, Jan. 12 (AP)—Homer Martin, president of the United Automobile Workers, said today the riots in connection with the General Motors strike in Flint, Mich., were "a demonstration of what Mr. Sloan means by collective bargaining."

The Brotherhood of Temple Mishkan Tefila will hold its January dinner tomorrow night in the Temple vestry. The guest speaker will be Rabbi Edward L. Israel of Baltimore.

Dr. Ray Shattuck Missing, Hunted In Charles River

After an all-night secret search, police today started to drag the Charles river near Harvard bridge in the fear that Dr. Ray H. Shattuck, Boston psychiatrist, might have drowned.

They based the fear on the finding of a bag of his professional instruments on Harvard bridge near the Cambridge end, coupled with an all-night check by telephone of relatives and friends.

Police also theorized that Dr. Shattuck could have been robbed and possibly slain.

Dr. Shattuck last appeared as an expert witness in trial of Abe Bell, who later was electrocuted with the Millen brothers for murder and robbery at the Needham Trust Company in February, 1934.

The finding of the instruments was reported to the Metropolitan District police, who checked relatives at 170 Huntington avenue, Back Bay, and 264 Park street, Stoughton. None of them knew anything of the physician's whereabouts.

Convinced that the doctor's body would be found in the river, Metropolitan police began dragging near Harvard bridge.

Theater Guild Opening Attracts Fashionable Audience

By BETTY ALDEN

THE THEATRE GUILD is doing its best to transport theatergoers back to their youth . . . "I loved that when I was 14" . . . or "it takes me back 20 years" . . . were the most frequent comments of the women who attended the openings of the Theater Guild play last evening and two weeks ago . . .

For on each occasion the guild presented a dramatization of a novel dear to the heart of teen age girls . . . "Jane Eyre" was the first, followed by "Pride and Prejudice," which opened at the Colonial Theater last evening . . .

FRANCES LOWELL

It is always a surprise, when witnessing an old play, to note that the humor and satire which lampooned customs and manners 100 years ago are still pertinent and humorous when applied to the present day . . .

Most everyone in the audience last evening felt he knew, in his other present day acquaintanceship, living counterparts of the characters portrayed in "Pride and Prejudice." . . .

All the regular Theater Guild followers were in their first night seats as usual . . . and an especially large number of last year's debs turned out for the occasion. . . . Becky Ames and Phyllis Motley were in a foursome with two young men . . . Becky in a rather tailored dinner dress of black velvet with a fitted white lame jacket and emerald green ascot tie . . . A gold and rhinestone coronet in her hair and a gold kid belt were Phyllis' only concession to frills in an otherwise simple and tailored taupe velvet dinner dress . . .

Mrs. Melvin Johnson's plum chiffon gown had a cape of ostrich feathers dyed to match exactly . . . and Mary Dewart, who attended with her fiance, Ben Goodale, looked very modish and tiny in black chiffon made with a full pleated skirt . . .

Most costume plays appeal more to the ladies . . . who like to compare the old styles with modern fashions . . . But last evening the gentlemen were equally impressed by the outfits of the male characters in the play . . .

The men who turn out in sober black night after night, escorting their wives and sweethearts who are all dolled up in colorful silks and flashing metal cloth, looked at the masculine costumes in the play . . . with tight fitting trousers revealing stalwart legs, long tailed coats with wide padded shoulders, all made in brilliant, flattering colors—and opined that those were really the good old days when a man could hold his own with the opposite sex in creating a striking figure . . .

Empire Gown of Ivory Taffeta

MARY PORTER WARDWELL, one of this year's debs, looked as winsome and quaint as the characters in the play . . . in her ivory taffeta empire gown, stripped with narrow bands of fine pastel embroidery . . . Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Winslow, Jr., and the latter's sister, Louise Condit, had a string of stags in their party . . . including Dean and Paul Wheatley of Hopkinton . . .

Mrs. Augustin Parker, Jr., was another who wore the popular black . . . hers relieved with a deep bertha of ivory lace . . . Nearby sat Frances Lowell who engaged her escort in a deep and serious discussion during intermission . . . She wore a novel gown of pale blue, quilted all over, and matching its cape exactly . . .

Dorothy MacAusland, who attended with her mother, Mrs. W. Russell MacAusland, wore a gilt bird perched on top of her head . . . and in a turquoise satin gown made a brilliant contrast to Lindy Watson's scarlet velvet as they visited between the acts . . . Mrs. MacAusland's gown was a shimmery affair of black with a yoke of shiny beads, and her black wrap had a deep collar of white fox . . .

Others present were the newly engaged Molly Rogers, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Toppan, Mr. and Mrs. Francis Hastings and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Prouty, who make a foursome at all the Theater Guild openings, and Mrs. Francis Shaw, Jr.

Tea Marks Opening of Exhibit

WHOLE FAMILIES turned out for the private view and tea yesterday afternoon to celebrate the opening of Malvina Hoffman's exhibit of sculptures at the Vose Galleries . . . Mr. and Mrs. Allen Forbes were accompanied by their daughter, Phyllis, as well as their teen-age son . . . both of whom idled around the tea table hospitably urging friends to sample the sandwiches which their mother had been responsible for supplying . . . Mrs. Forbes was co-chairman of the occasion with Mrs. Robert Lovett . . .

Phyllis' cousins, Cynthia Forbes and Esmee de Menocal, more fully appreciated the beauty of the exhibits because of the enlightening explanations of Esmee's mother, Mrs. Daniel de Menocal . . . and of course, Esmee, being a sub-deb at the age when movie stars seem to be the most glamorous creatures, never missed an opportunity to watch Frances Rich, a movie star's daughter, whose flair for art and especially sculpturing, led her to become a pupil of Miss Hoffman's . . . Miss Rich, whose breezy personality and good looks endeared her to everyone there, wore a bright spring print in which Dubonnet is the dominant color and all her accessories, hat, shoes, gloves, bag and belt, were all of Dubonnet . . .

Miss Hoffman, a most attractive person, with a slender figure and white fluffy hair, wore a simple black velveteen suit with an orange and gold vestee, and a little Cossack type black turban . . . One of her most distinguished guests was Miss Anne Morgan of New York, who had a very pleasant afternoon chatting with many Boston acquaintances . . . and others present were Mrs. Nathaniel Brown, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Francis Adams, Mrs. J. Gardner Bradley, Mr. and Mrs. L. Cabot Briggs, Charlotte Rantoul with her mother, Mrs. Augustus Rantoul, Mrs. Paul Sachs, Mrs. Hugh Bancroft with her daughter, Mrs. William C. Cox . . .

ANNE MEANS HARRIOT COLE

ANNE MEANS and HARRIOT COLE must have taken the old saying about all work and no play seriously . . . For life to them is now just one play after another. No sooner had they finished appearing in the Junior League's Christmas play, "The Blue Bird," than they were called upon to be advertising salesgirls who are concentrating upon filling the pages of the program for the forthcoming Vincent Club show with advertising.

Cathedral Group in Session

Listen, World! -:- By Elsie Robinson

So we started what we thought would be a weekly youth article. Decided to give Young America the stump every Monday in this space . . . let it say its piece.

"A reckless notion!" warned the Gloomy. "Opening the door to impudent chatter . . . mischievous radicalism!"

But we believed in the youngsters—and took a chance. Result? The most smashing and surprising victory in newspaper history. All week long we've been following the column for the last three weeks. Never have editorials developed under more loads of honest, healthy argument.

Before YOU one of those who said the Younger Generation was composed of spineless nincompoops who "don't know words of Carper". Here's proof, by the ton, that Young America thinks straighter, talks harder and is more eager to be up-and-atem than any generation that ever carried the red-white-and-blue.

THEY FACE FACTS

Yes, we admit—they're strong for play, haven't much use for needless sacrifice, and give much of our mouldy sentimentality the ha-ha. But beneath that seeming frivolity, there's a stern insistence on facing life as is, which won't be put off with Fairy Tales.

Thank God for that! Thank God for the brave young ardor which dares defy complacent stupidity and smug hypocrisy . . . which dares demand a NEW DEAL FOR THE WHOLE HUMAN RACE! And—take a tip, stranger—you'll be a wiser, livelier human being if you'll yank yourself out of your rut and take the trail with Young America in its weekly column.

Here, for example is a suggestion from DOROTHY VAN ELGORT which should start some snappy talk-fests.

"A Social Security Act for youth!" is Dorothy's battle cry. "Give talented young people one year under Federal support to discover what they can—or can't—do!

"We have a Social Security Act for the old—and that's right. But why not give our worried young people an equal break? Why force them to take any job that comes along, whether it fits them or is helpful to the world, just so they can eat?

"There are thousands of particularly talented young people who might become great artists or scientists if given just one year's help. One glorious, carefree year, to find out what you have!

"If you have the real stuff, the world will be immeasurably richer. If you haven't, you can never again whine that the world hasn't given you a chance.

"Think of the chaos this generation has faced since birth . . . war . . . hysterical boom days . . . the disorder of a new machine age . . . then depression! . . . No wonder we cry, 'GIVE US ONE CHANCE TO FIND OURSELVES!'"

A brave letter but—WOULD IT WORK? What's YOUR idea? Should particularly talented young people receive Federal aid?

WHAT DO YOU SAY?

They do in some countries, Mexico, today, is offering young artists a better break than they receive in America . . . Russia is backing its young scientists. Would such encouragement raise our own standard? OR IS A CERTAIN AMOUNT OF HARDSHIP NECESSARY FOR THE DEVELOPMENT OF FINE HUMANITY? Does character become finer, stronger, if protected from drudgery and anxiety? Or would it merely coddle the mediocre?

Think back to your own young years. Do you believe that you would be better off today if you had one year to find yourself, after leaving school?

Yes, we really want to know. The youngsters—meaning anyone under 30 — have the stump on Mondays. Now it's YOUR turn to Tell the World—and it's listening.

(This column welcomes and requests comments. Letters presenting personal problems may be used, but letters will be handled confidentially and answered promptly if stamped, addressed envelopes are included.)

PROTECTING a $40 JOB

MISS WRIGHT, GET A BITE OF SUPPER AND THEN COME BACK FOR SOME IMPORTANT LETTERS.
OH DEAR! I CAN'T TELL HIM I AM NOT EQUAL TO IT!
I HAVE TO WORK TONIGHT AND MY PAINS HAVE COME ON SO HARD THAT MY EYES ARE CROSSED. WHAT A BREAK!
WHAT A BREAK! YOU NEED ME HERE. TAKE THIS, DRINK SOME WATER, AND FORGET THE TIME OF MONTH.
THAT WAS A LOT OF WORK, BUT YOU DIDN'T SEEM TO MIND IT. THANKS.
YOU'RE QUITE WELCOME, MR. DAVIS. IT WAS NO EFFORT. GOODNIGHT.
THERE IT IS—MIDOL RELIEVES "REGULAR" PAIN; IT SURE DOES. AND THAT REMINDS ME TO GET A BOX RIGHT NOW.

A GREAT AUTHOR'S STORY OF LOVE VS. DUTY

(A Cosmopolitan Picture to Be Released Soon by Warner Brothers)

Dean Harwood of Trinity Cathedral has achieved a great reputation as a modern miracle man. Phoebe, a keen concentrate-type nurse in love for years, embodies duty and unselfishness. She sees that this problem is straining their relationship, to what he calls the Long Parade—"a trudging along, plum to climax, in an endless procession in which our most important interests are lost in commotion."

To him for a solution of their many problems come those most affected by the blundering tragedy at Parkview Hospital which caused young Dr. Newell Paige to abandon his bride and career and friends.

Among the distressed callers upon Dean Harwood at Trinity Cathedral is a dark, young woman named Sonia Duquesne, who is destined to become Phyllis Decker's closest friend.

Phyllis Decker is unable to put out of her mind the tragic shake-up in Parkview Hospital—the disaster to newly young Dr. Newell Paige self-surrendingly took responsibility for, the arrest of his pretty wife, the blundering tragedy to which it was due, the devastating results to both and a new destiny in other walks of life.

Chapter 6

Every week-day, but Saturday, a procession of men ferried in the reception parlor of his residence taking turns in conference with him, keeping him at his desk from 10 to 1. In the afternoon, from 3 to 6, women of all ages and ranks appeared there for the same purpose. He never referred to it or thought of it as a "clinic."

He compiled no statistics, posted no records, permitted no clerical frumpiness in the handling of the strange business. An unassuming volunteer for the day welcomed the callers and seated them. In due time they would have their turn.

Every morning at eight two young nurses, garbed alike, handle duties. Jeanie Adams, a cripple—only the daily indirect chance of the cathedral, where the heavy atoms might be blowing outside, whatever tumultuous social matter he agitating the joy of the hour, folds or the world, by resonant voice intoned a petition, for all lands and conditions of men, that thou wouldst be pleased to make thy ways known unto them.

When the last meeting service is was ended, the minister would assist the dean to a chair opened on four in the center of the chancel, facing the high altar, and leave him alone for a half hour.

And then it was that when broken people came to Dean Harwood for counseling, some of them, it was said, went out of the presence with the feeling that they had been very close to Heavenly fatherhood.

She entered the dean's study, library and retreat to write the agent, and, with a sigh of complete physical fatigue, sank into a capacious armchair, seated the opposite chair, and, with a perfunctory nod and a tired attempt to send a cordial greeting, said to the dean:

"Sonia Duquesne," she said in response to his low-voiced query. "She's a nurse at the hospital, a little younger than I am, but a lovely woman."

Reading much of it between the lines, the Dean leaned forward, poured his visitor a cup of tea, and friendly chat of her, the rather hard, sophisticated mask she had brought with her had softened, was replaced by an almost refreshing expression of self-defense, of uncertainty, of impending tears. Her face now appeared to her dear but disciplined face some unmistakable evidence of suffering.

The young lady's chin quivered, her mouth curved down in an impressive way, and she made a valiant effort to control it, but she couldn't. She covered her face with her hands and wept unrestrainedly.

The dean quietly got up, walked to the door, turned the key, returned to his chair, and waited.

It took all that you bear his wife to ill-will?"

"Oh, no not at all," she replied quickly. "In fact, lately, since he has become so hard-pressed, and I know she was ill, I have—"

Don't Tell

"Don't!" commanded the Dean, sit sternly that she winced under his unexpected rebuke. "You mustn't tell that to anybody—not even to me!" His voice grew gentle. "And now I add that I consider you a very fortunate woman to be possessed of such a soul. If you were my daughter I would be proud of you."

You don't think I've lost my soul, then?"

The place does have a foreign atmosphere. Perhaps I am theatrical—to the extent of playing a part in the course of my daily business."

"Do you attend the services of the Cathedral?" asked the Dean, still smiling a little over her frank confession.

"No, sir! I have no religion."

"Very well then. Let us begin. Tell me all about it. What brought you here?" . . . And remember that the more directly you come at it, the more time we will have to talk—profitably . . . What has he done to you?"

She sat for a while with a perplexed expression on her face, as if edging hurtfully feels, presently said:

"No—I am not a mind-reader," explained the Dean gently, "but I have had much experience in listening."

"I believe that," said Sonia. "Well—he has decided to go back to his wife. She is not very well, and thinks she wants him. She has treated him very shabbily. It was her fault that he had interest in their home. Now she begs him to return. I regret him to go. And I intend never to see him again. That was yesterday." Sonia finished, stood up, gave a shrug and tossed the dear beside the painting with a little gesture of finality. Her lashes were white and still cured lids.

"So—I really did not come to you for advice," she continued. "For there is nothing to decide. They told me you were able to help people who had trouble. That's why I came. I'm glad I did . . . This is a very painful place . . . You will not scold me. I've had all the punishment I can take."

"You have him—I think."

"Decidedly." And he bows me. He needs me, too, for he has been very unfortunate recently—since the crash."

"Did he contribute to your support?"

"Never! It wasn't on that basis at all. In fact, for the past few weeks—"

Dean Harwood's lips tightened, and he merely raised a hand.

"Don't you want me to tell you," asked Sonia, widened, shaking her head grimly.

"Not that . . . I think you will feel better afterward if you do not confide that part of it."

Sonia looked puzzled. Then nodded suddenly.

"I take it that you bear his wife no ill-will?"

"Oh, no not at all," she replied quickly. "In fact, lately, since he has become so hard-pressed, and I know she was ill, I have—"

"Don't!" commanded the Dean, sit sternly that she winced under his unexpected rebuke. "You mustn't tell that to anybody—not even to me!" His voice grew gentle. Prints Burst Into Full Bloom

HERE YOU SEE the print fashion story at one quick glance! Large, splashy flower motifs scattered with an air of gay abandon. Or small, carefully patterned and vastly becoming flowerets in prim line up. Often small bouquets are deliberately spaced, sometimes fairly wide apart. And with the better-sheltered mood sharing one half of the print picture, frequently appliques or painted-on flower designs are scattered along hem-lines, at waist or neck lines. Originality is the by-word, whether the flowers are used in Surrealistic disorder, or are as carefully trained in line as West Pointers.

Miss Polly Carter models both frocks, both Fashion Congress selections.

Left, huge heads of Queen Anne lace, white as the original flower, are scattered on black satin. One of the loveliest uses of the very much-of-the-moment black and white, with smart accenting accomplished by the black turban with a white roll-edge. A budget frock, though it looks so very lush and luxurious.

The shorter the sleeve the smarter, in many new afternoon prints. On the right is print and plain frock which will give you a chance to show off your nicest bracelets. Fine pleats break the slimness of the skirt. And the off-the-face hat shows, again, the extreme popularity of the type.

Martha Lee Gives Tasty Banana Recipes

This Fruit Was One of First Given Quintuplets

By MARTHA LEE

WE WONDER if you know any more about bananas other than that they are so very good to eat? Not long ago we attended a lecture and demonstration on bananas and we found out so many new and interesting things about them we felt you'd like to know about them, too.

Bananas were flourishing in the valley of the Euphrates as long ago as 327 B. C. and were eaten in great bunches by the armies of Alexander the Great.

Bananas were first brought to this country through the port of Boston by a native of Cuba in the year 1804. He was highly excited the name of the banana in the United States. Dealers, however, saw an ideal food for children, you know, and fully ripe bananas were one of the first solid foods given those famous "quints."

We all agree that our greatest trial is in keeping bananas from discoloring when we have to prepare them some time before they are served.

But don't worry about it any more as all you need do is put the slices in orange, grapefruit, lemon or canned pineapple juice until serving time and they will not turn black. We all have one of these juices on hand all the time so that solves a very difficult problem for us.

Then we also discovered many delicious recipes for using bananas for cooking and here are a few of them.

BANANA MUFFINS

1 cup flour
½ teaspoon soda
1 teaspoon baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
1 egg
1 cup sliced bananas
2 tablespoons shortening
2 tablespoons sour milk

Measure and sift dry ingredients. Add to them the slightly beaten egg, milk and melted shortening. Add sliced bananas last. Fill muffin tins 2-3 full and bake in 400 deg. F. oven until done.

BANANA SHERBET

2 cups mashed bananas
½ cup sugar
½ cup white corn syrup
6 tablespoons lemon juice
1 stiffly beaten egg white
2 cups milk

Combine all ingredients except egg white and mix thoroughly. Then fold in stiffly beaten egg white carefully and turn into the tray of automatic refrigerator and freeze at coldest temperature until frozen. This makes about 1½ pints of sherbet.

BANANA SPICE CAKE

2½ cups sifted flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
1 teaspoon soda
1 teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon cloves
1½ teaspoons cinnamon
½ teaspoon nutmeg
2-3 cup shortening
1 1-3 cups sugar
2 eggs, well beaten
1 2-3 cups mashed bananas (4 to 5 bananas)
2 teaspoons vanilla

Sift together the flour, baking powder, soda, salt and spices. Rub the shortening to a creamy consistency with the back of a spoon. Stir the sugar, a few tablespoons at a time, into the shortening and continue stirring after each addition until light and fluffy. Add eggs and beat well. Add flour mixture, alternately with bananas, a small amount at a time. Beat after each addition until smooth and thoroughly blended. Pour into greased layer cake pans and bake in a moderate oven (350 deg. F.) about 30 minutes or until cake is done. Makes two 8-inch layers.

BANANA MILK SHAKE

1 fully ripe banana
1 cup cold milk

Slice the banana into bowl and beat with rotary egg beater or electric mixer until creamy—or press banana through medium mesh wire strainer with a spoon. Add milk and mix thoroughly. Serve cold. Makes 12 ounces—two medium-size drinks.

Fashion Flashes

TANAGRA fashions are the latest craze. Not satisfied with simulating Delmarle and the Tyros, smart women are now rushing to the Metropolitan Museum to look up on what the well-dressed women was wearing in 200 B. C.

Frank Clyne New York designer, started it all with her Paris Beach showing of Tanagra flowing costumes. For inspiration, she took the collection of Tanagra figurines she brought back from her recent world cruise, and all of the models in her new collection are modernized versions of long-robed styles.

The ladies of Tanagra, in case you don't know, were the playmates of the Greek males. They are found in song and legend for their beauty, their elegance and their love of fun and sex. Also, as we said, they knew all the tricks of dressing their best points.

They were head-but beautifully draped costumes, allowing freedom of movement.

And their influence on the new beach fashions, like the Greek thread of the toga, means the use of drapery in new and intriguing ways.

Put Your Muscles to Work; Leg Swinging Helps

(Copyright, 1937, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

By IDA JEAN KAIN

CURB your curves with well-directed exercise. Fat pads designate lazy muscles, and it pays to know the best mechanical positions for putting these muscles to work.

All exercise isn't what it's cracked up to be. It can be vigorous without being efficient. The science of bodily movements eliminates waste motion by concentrating on the trouble-making muscles. Let's take advantage of the best exercise positions to put our daily dozen on an efficiency plane.

You use your arms most of the time—and cannot understand why they are flabby. Ordinary arm movements use only the front muscles of the upper arms, the biceps—and the muscles on the back of the upper arm, the triceps, not at all. This accounts for the tendency to pendulous flesh in that region.

The exercise position, which brings the triceps muscles into action is that of the arms at shoulder level, or that of putting force behind a blow. A punching bag is excellent for firming the arms. This group of muscles is notoriously lazy, and most women allow their arms to age through failure to exercise in the correct position—with arms held at shoulder level.

The best possible exercise position for double chins and dowager's cushions is the reactive of standing tall. With the head held high.

The muscles along the inner and outer thighs are exercised when the knee is flexed and the leg swung from one side to the other. The movement is both adduction and abduction.

Lying flat on your back, knees flexed and feet flat on the floor, affords the best position for the performance of abdominal exercises.

For the calf muscles, the heels are kept pointed or flat on the floor to stretch the muscles and reduce the size of the leg. The developing exercises are performed on the toes.

Apply the science of bodily movements to reduce the muscles underlying the fat pads to normal size and tone. In following the exercises given in this and other column and leaflets, be sure that you perform the movements in correct position—or you may miss the bulges.

Health

Training In Correct Posture

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

IN SPEAKING of posture, we include not only the position assumed by the body in the upright position, but also the position taken in standing, walking, sitting or reclining.

Persons who carry themselves well, have correct posture, usually possess poise and self-reliance. The chief value of proper posture is its relationship to good health.

There is no doubt that persons with faulty posture suffer from many unnecessary disorders. It can be said, in short, that good posture and good health go hand in hand.

Many health authorities believe that poor posture is purely a faulty habit and can be prevented or overcome. Of course, some persons inherit well-proportioned bodies and just naturally have excellent posture. Others can develop it by proper exercise, wearing sensible clothing, eating well-chosen food and taking thought of how the body is held.

Correct posture should be taught during childhood. Shortly after children learn to walk, their movements and posture are graceful, even though they are quite unconscious of the existence of definite rules. But in time, when they are clothed in garments tight at the waist, or are equipped with improper footgear, faulty posture may develop.

In some instances, the posture becomes defective because of a definite weakness in the mechanism of the body. Curvature of the spine or deformities of the hip are factors which lead to marked postural defects. These disturbances require special medical attention.

Every effort should be made to correct a child who has a tendency toward round shoulders or other physical deformities. This is best overcome by simple exercises taken regularly, morning and night. The child should be directed to stand erect, with the hands placed behind the neck. The body is then brought forward, drawing the shoulders and elbows as close together as possible.

Hello Everybody. This is Fred Hoey Speaking.

Had the late W. Lost Robinson penned a story of baseball at Brooklyn it would have come as a contribution to sports literature. Robbie, as he was affectionately called, was always good for a laugh when he came to town. Robbie knew baseball and he knew baseball players and he could tell a story.

Fred Hoey

The fast ball alone is not enough. Among the all-time greats Amos Rusie, Walter Johnson, Rube Waddell and Joe Wood could breeze the fast one by the batter and establish strikeout and low hit records. Bob Lefty Grove has acquired a change of pace since his fire ball lost some of its buzz. Dizzy Dean and Van Mungo have so much fancy stuff, together with their terrific speed, that they are riding handsomely.

Los Angeles, Jan. 12—The story of Nijinski is finally to be screened and by Alexander Korda. Any number of Hollywood motion picture companies were interested in Romola Nijinska's biography of her husband at the time the book was published, but most were afraid of certain censorial situations. But the English producer apparently has no such fears as he has assigned Josef Von Sternberg to produce it following "I, Claudius."

Frank Fay With Oakie On WEEI Tonight

By N. F. T.

Some of the flighty foolishness as Frank Fay is in store for Jack Oakie program patrons (WEEI) tonight between 8:30 and 10:30 o'clock.

N. F. T.

Frank was famously irresistible—set "the fashions over" and generally "the fashions over" and generally about beginning to famish one of immortals, has been apparent in the radio scene of activity for quite a while. Maybe laughing is his favorite form of performance, although that evening might find him displaying his way through a song with Jack Oakie, etc. Either time of evening should be worth while, more so the second half of which Frank and Jack seldom fails short of entertainment excellence.

When the weekly "Husbands and Wives" half-hour hooks (WBZ) tonight from 9:30 until 10 evening, it should be good, about wifey being misunderstood, is due to be partially misused, if not actually put apart. That's the way it has to feel this program will be, not reducing it, it doesn't "Dude Ranch" interests (WBZ) at 8:30 this evening is Tommy Tucker and his Lonesome Cowboys, and Vega Ranch Boys. Between the two colorful personalities some of the actions proved quite amusing, and one of those nights would make a good state of Ted Hammerstein

Thereby hangs a tale. Frank Fay, in his "Hammerstein Music Hall" broadcast tonight (WEEI) from 8 to 8:30 p. m., E. S. T., will be assisted by Miss Tilly, has just returned to New York from Hollywood where she lived in the picture version of "Camille" with Greta Garbo and Robert Taylor.

Soviet Russia: Foe of Peace, Civilization and Democracy

THE New Year's greeting sent by Premier Caballero of Spain to Soviet Russia was an OFFICIAL UNMASKING of the allegiance and alliance of the Red Government of Madrid to the Red Government of Moscow.

This was Caballero's message as published on the first page of Izvestia, of Moscow, the official organ of the Stalin Government:

"THE SPANISH WORKING CLASS IS FOREVER UNITED WITH THE RUSSIAN WORKERS. WE WILL NEVER FORGET THE SOLIDARITY OF THE SOVIET WORKERS WITH US IN THIS DIFFICULT TIME. THE PROLETARIAT OF SPAIN WILL ALWAYS STRIVE DURING THE WAR AND AFTER THE WAR IS OVER TO FOLLOW THE EXAMPLE OF YOUR GREAT COUNTRY."

It is thus throughout the world—every Communist, whether he lives in Valparaiso, New York or Timbuctoo, owes allegiance ONLY to the homeland, SOVIET RUSSIA.

The basis of all the trouble in Europe is Soviet Russia and its militant Communism, which spreads its web of subversive propaganda from the Polish border to Land's End.

With the Russian menace confronting it, no state in Europe can possibly have a genuinely democratic government. Democracy is not iron-handed enough to deal with Communistic sabotage.

Democracies being essentially tolerant, they have not the bulldog qualities of determination and violence to restrain the desperate will of the lowest elements in the social structure to rule—and RUIN.

Only force can subdue force, so the mailed fist of Fascism was raised to combat Communism—to suppress revolution, to preserve order, to protect lives and property, and to save our more or less peaceful civilization, with its culture and political institutions, which centuries of heroic effort have created.

* * *

WHEREVER Communism has raised its head Fascism has followed—Italy, Germany, Hungary, Poland, Greece, and, it may be tomorrow, Spain, France and England.

Yet after Fascism was chosen in preference to Communism in states that put order above anarchy, Russia persisted in its impudent interference and boring.

The armed forces of Germany and Italy are not formed to fight England and France, BUT TO REPEL SOVIET RUSSIA. The latter's gigantic military establishment tops the world, and Germany and Italy are doing nothing in armament except to match Russia's moves and menaces.

THE WORLD CANNOT HAVE DISARMAMENT AS LONG AS RUSSIA'S ARMAMENT THREATENS THE WORLD.

The world cannot hope for peace as long as Russia plots war, and, indeed, as in Spain and China, actually MAKES WAR AGAINST PEACE.

The world must preserve and protect order or have ANARCHY inflicted upon it.

Therefore—unfortunate as it may seem—DESPOTISM MUST BE MET BY DESPOTISM, FORCE BY FORCE, STEEL BY STEEL.

Democracy is not a government for war, but for PEACE.

There is, however, no opportunity for peace or democracy as long as Russian anarchistic Communism seeks to ed both—to destroy our carefully evolved social system, our deeply-imbedded religious observances, and to murder ruthlessly all who believe in the structure of our civilization and its ascending graph to greater LIBERTIES and MENTAL CONQUESTS.

* * *

IF the intelligent, kindly and liberal people of the world, if the COMPETENT and CONSTRUCTIVE people of the world want to save themselves and their heart-born and brin-born convictions, their institutions and their opportunities, their ELEMENTAL HUMAN RIGHTS TO LIVE IND BREATHE AND THINK FREELY, they MUST resist the armed march of social, political and cultural anrchy—OR BE TRODDEN DOWN TO DIRT UNDER ITS IRON HEEL.

Criinal Communism, like every other criminal conspiracy gainst human well-being and human rights, MUST E DESTROYED.

Violating Neutrality

ATTEMPTS to violate American neutrality for the benefit of the Spanish Reds by recruiting American labor for the government at Valencia are not restricted to Boston, a like situation prevails in New York.

A group of Communists and Communist sympathizers in that city, under the name of the American Society for Technical Aid to Spanish Democracy, is seeking funds wherewith to transport American workers to the Iberian peninsula — with every recruit guaranteed a job.

The actual purpose of this activity is, of course, TO FURNISH SOLDIERS for the Red Army.

A statement from the group said:

"Every steel worker, every automobile worker, every miner capable of taking his place in the industrial and productive life of Spain WILL FREE ONE SPANISH WORKER TO JOIN THE MILITARY FORCES OF HIS OWN COUNTRY."

Obviously, the effect of such a practise is precisely the same as recruiting soldiers here.

Moreover, the scheme looks very much like a mere subterfuge for military recruiting.

Once a foreign worker enters the Spanish lines, it is not as easy to conscript him into the fighting forces as it is to place him in a factory.

A Good Recipe For Peace

CHARLES FRANCIS ADAMS, former Secretary of the Navy, believes in peace, and, as a believer, wants to preserve it.

At the recent annual dinner of the Kings Chapel Chapter of the Unitarian Laymen's League, Mr. Adams gave his peace recipe, a good one.

"The best way for the United States to maintain neutrality," he said, "is to be THOROUGHLY equipped with the most modern implements of warfare."

Strong nations, like strong men, are respected. European and Asiatic countries, however militaristic, do not make war when war means suicide.

Mr. Adams knows this. America's misfortune is that many do not know it.

Lawrence Mill Suffers

THE effects of a serious labor dispute too often extend beyond the confines of the particular industry involved.

New proof comes today from Lawrence, where five hundred employes of the Pacific Mills' worsted division have lost their jobs.

The curtailment of employment is in city far to the front in nation's recovery program is not the Lawrence workers' fault, nor the Pacific Mills'. The blame lies miles away—in the Michigan automobile strike.

Closed Detroit factories mean cancelled cloth orders and cancelled cloth orders mean cancelled jobs for those that make cloth.

It is a regrettable circumstance the ignorant suffering with neither hope of reward nor promise of compensation.

The President To Speak

ANNOUNCEMENT that President Roosevelt may speak in Boston on St. Patrick's Day, March 17, directs public attention to an outstanding organization.

It is the Charitable Irish Society, founded 200 years ago by leading citizens.

Throughout two centuries of national progress, the organization held dearly to the ideal of its founders.

Its contribution to Boston has been beyond estimation.

Now, in an era devoted largely to social legislation, it is fitting that the President of the United States make the Society's 200th birthday the occasion for an address.

Divorces Set New Record

DIVORCE actions, 624 in number, 55 more than the previous year, reached a new high mark in Essex County during 1923.

An average of two persons daily going to court and seeking marital freedom is not a healthy situation in any district, especially one the size of Essex County.

Statistics do not tell the story, nor so much as hint of the tragedy of divorce. Elsewhere, in the homes of the parted husbands and wives, are little children whose lives must in some way suffer. They are the REAL victims of divorce.

That's That

By Bruce Gustin

It has been a long time since any congressional statement received more speculation than the intimation in President Roosevelt's message to Congress of some plan of converting the United States Supreme Court to the "New Deal" philosophy of government.

He said:

"Means must be found to adapt our legal forms and our judicial interpretation to the actual pressing national needs of the large progressive democracy in the modern world. We do not ask the courts to call non-existent powers into being, but we have a right to expect that conceded powers of those legitimately supplied shall be made effective instruments for the common good.

"The process of our democracy must not be imperilled by the denial of essential powers of free government, or change from interpretation of the Constitution!

President Roosevelt and many of his supporters sincerely believe the Constitution as it now stands permits the federal government to exercise what he considers essential powers of government. The opposition to these views is not based upon Constitutional grounds, but other staunch supporters of the President who are as firmly convinced the Constitution does not permit the federal government to do some of the things the administration wants to do and which the Supreme Court ruled it cannot do.

The opinion of Senator Adams (D), of Colorado and others that the President's proposed amendment enlarging federal powers should be submitted if the constitutional issue is to be settled quickly is sound. It would be a dangerous procedure to even try to substitute the judgment of public sentiment for calm judicial judgment in the interpretation of the Constitution by the courts. That other staunch supporters of the President who are as firmly convinced the Constitution does not permit the federal government to do some of the things the administration wants to do and which the Supreme Court ruled it cannot do.

The opinion of Senator Adams (D), of Colorado and others that the President's proposed amendment enlarging federal powers should be submitted if the constitutional issue is to be settled quickly is sound. It would be a dangerous procedure to even try to substitute the judgment of public sentiment for calm judicial judgment in the interpretation of the Constitution by the courts. That baseball would be if umpires made their decisions according to the caucus or how the fans felt.

Think what would happen to this nation if the courts, in their decisions, tried to figure what the public wants instead of what the Constitutions say.

The difference is the difference between order and chaos.

If democratic government is to be preserved in the United States, independence of the courts must be preserved. They must, in some powers when the federal government cannot exercise. If the government were all powerful it no longer would be democratic. The principal difference between what we call "democratic government" and a despotism is the former is a government of limited powers and the latter is a government of unlimited absolutism. We have a written Constitution to limit the powers of our government and an independent judiciary to rule if necessary, the natural desire of the legislative and executive departments to exert more and more authority.

The first cost of war is bad enough. The deferred costs are worse. The federal government, as a result of the World War, that government, is still paying pensions to two relatives of soldiers who took part in the war of 1812. If, after 121 years, we are still paying for a little war like that of 1812, how long will it take to pay for the World War?

Richard Himber, the orchestra bandsman, is also a magician of professional caliber. He writes me he is dropping around soon to teach me this one. It is a trick based on a new principle of magic called psycho-skill. It entails, to marked cards, no confederates and no sleight of hand. You ask a person to take his own deck of cards into another room, shuffle them, look at a card, remember where it is and when the deck is brought back you tell what the card is and how far it is from the top. I'm atwitter.

Marine horror: Those sea food restaurants that dress their windows to suggest a lonely strip of beach at low tide.

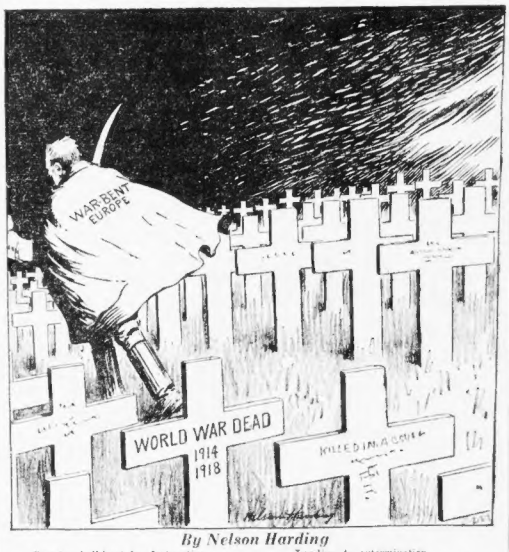
And I frequently wonder if any place can look more forlorn than an amusement resort in the winter. Coney Island, for instance, with its gaded trappings, half covered, its flashing electric signs hollows, merry-go-round horses flicked with drifting snow. Deserted and gaunt goody shops and freak museums with gaudy banners whipped by chilled winds. And in the distance the rhythmic and melancholy swish of the sea against a bleak shore.

J. P. Morgan gave a dinner and dance for his grandchildren a recent evening at the Morgan town house on Madison avenue in the Murray Hill district. I happened to pass through the neighborhood the night the ruinous were on with the venerable mansion aglitter with lights while limousine after limousine rolled up. The next day I read the guest, numbered 600, and the entire meal was cooked on the premises. That's something I'd give a cookie to see. A kitchen big enough to prepare food for 600.

The stages most dependable leading man is probably A. E. Matthews. He has supported almost every star in his long service in the theater. Not many can give such elegant gliisandos to the simple business of handing the butler his hat, gloves, stick. Although off stage he has a war wound limp, it is never noticeable before footlights. He will be appears in the library in dressing gown for a final scotch and soda, has given the scene a sharp touch of the grand manner.

The Russian restaurant craze blows hot and cold. Five or six times it has burgeoned and wilted. Just now it's in bloom again, inspired no doubt by the success of the Madamoiselle Busse at the fashionable St. Regis. There is a distinct Russian society made up of real members of the court during imperial days. They have their select dinners and balls. Reunion in Vienna affairs. Grand Duchess Marie is the recognized leader of the top drawer set.

'Between the Crosses, Row on Row'



By Nelson Harding

Seeming hell-bent for destruction.
Europe blindly stumbles backward,
Seeing not the rows of crosses,
Warning signs along that pathway
Leading to extermination.
Every grave should teach a lesson
If the Old World but could learn it.
On that path WE shall not follow.

New York Day by Day -:- By O. O. McIntyre

New York, Jan. 12—More than any other city, New York believes in the power of a smart address. So long as a district can be kept tony it is more than likely to survive. But let one spark appear and in no time the whole harvest of apples is ready for the cash man.

West 42d street is a conspicuous example of how a street can precipitately have more amusement night. A few exception, stores and a continuous burlesque show or so and the Broadway aura is in. Once tainted, it often takes a generation to remove the tarnish.

Just now the smartest residential addresses are probably those in the more unpretentious sections of Park avenue and certain blocks in the East 60's, 70's, 80's and 90's. Only a few years ago Upper Fifth avenue's Millionaire Row was the fashionable thing. But not any more.

Madison avenue is rapidly becoming the best low shopping center. For a time it swept around from 5th on to a block of West 57th street. And then with another sweep headed on Madison, which is now a hive of classy boutiques. How long it will remain thus, nobody knows.

The Jungle Drum Cures

The Human Side of the News

By Edwin C. Hill

Edwin C. Hill

The faint, far throb of jungle drums is heard over and over again in our supposedly rational new world of steel and concrete. There is scarcely a phase of our civilization which isn't rooted deep in the primitive strata of the race life. Tendrils of the jungle growth creep into the white, sterile arcana of science. For ages past, sorcerers have been making hocus-pocus noises to cure disease, and now the scientists are doing it.

Before the recent convention of the Society of American Bacteriologists at Indianapolis, there was submitted studies in sound, by certified experts in scientists of the School of Medicine of the University of Pennsylvania, pioneering the use of noise, to cripple streptococci—dangerous gangsters of the sub-microscopic underworld.

Dr. Stuart Mudd and others use an electro-magnet to make a piercing screech of precisely controlled vibrations. This "scares" the antibodies, the always-present police force, into action, and makes them close in on the streptococci like G-men surrounding a kidnaper. Jungle obi-men, doing the same thing, thought they were scaring away the demon. Science disproves that. Instead, it incites the benign spirits who assail the virulent intruder.

A WHOLESOME VIEW

When one notes the latest, faltering, groping "improved" knowledge of the race, as contrasted to the rational findings of modern science, he is apt to be accused of fostering superstition, as was the late G. K. Chesterton. This skeptical attitude, it seems to this observer, is wholesome.

For every relating of fact in primitive lore, there is a wilderness of crude stupidity, suffering, preposterous huggermuggery, dirt, cruelty and disease—all coming under the heading of superstition.

In Africa, in the Matto Grasso region of Brazil, still encysted in a forgotten epoch; in the high, windswept outey reaches of Tibet, in French Indo-China, vast isolated people has evolved its own noise therapeutics to cure disease. Tributory to Africa is the elaborate sound pharmacopoeia of the West Indian islands, seeping into the remote jungles of South America as handed down by generations of obi-men.

THE JUNGLE CHANT

One of my friends, now a New York columnist, tells me of weird jungle noise clinics on the Chichunaque River, junctures of Mayo and Aztec civilizations.

"The obi-man has to be as expert as a trap drummer in making variegated noises," he said. "I will never forget one night when a red, Chinese lacquer moon was sinking in the jungle river as they carried a Chocoi chief to the river bank for treatment. Frequently, in this and other countries, the noise assault against the devil of sickness was worked up to a dancing horde.

"The obi-man began by slowly intoning some solemn gibberish which I could associate with no language I had ever heard before. Then he began his pounding, shrieking, eyerolling, climactic noise build-up. About all I could make of it was that the noise became more and more culminating in a faut screaming sound, made by some kind of a one-stringed instrument which seemed to reach beyond the range of human hearing.

"This was the payoff. The chief leaned over the now writhing body of the chief with some sort of a mumbo-jumbo. I was unable to get any accurate idea of what was the matter with the chief, or the mumbo-jumbo. I was unable to get any accurate idea of what was the matter with the chief, or the mumbo-jumbo. But, at any rate, this noise treatment was routine in the jungle, and the natives went to the obi-men for a tom-tom or rattle work-out the way we go to a doctor."

Had the devil doctors somehow come across curative methods which the laboratory scientists are now discovering? Ask someone like Alexis Carrel, or Dr. Howard W. Haggard about that.

"Yure's Truely"

By Winston Norman

London, England
Jan. 12

Mr. Roosevelt
Wash. D. C.
U. S. A.

DEAR MR. PRESIDENT:

Say Mr. President I got a T. L. for you. I been asking everybody in England what they think of our 1/2 President and they all says they think you are A First rate.

That means you got England A Ireland a 100 per cent behind you, Mr. Hank Ford, making a total of 48 states. These English folks is the most non-excited people I ever seen, and when they brake down & say somebody is a Fine Chap, that is just like they would tear their hair & air & hurrying him in West Minster Abbey.

Now Mr. President, I am going to help you with Florin affairs by telling you some of the funny ideas which Europe has about our good old U. S. A. They got some crazy ideas about America, a few of which is as follows:

1. They think Americans don't do nothing but chase after Money. They do not like our U. S. moneychaseing, but if we catch any they will be glad to borrow it.

2. They think that Americans wastes anything we lay our hands on, even if we don't stop it quick we will go Busted. But even after we are busted, they figger we will be Less Broke than Europe is.

3. They think Holly-wood is the Capital of the U. S. A. and it don't do no good to argue with them, because they seen it in the Movies.

4. They think we got too many Gidgits for making Ice Cubs, such as Ice Boxes and Vacuum Cleaners. They don't see no reazns for doing these things with machinery when Wives is so cheap. You don't have to repair a Wife, you just get a new one when she's wore out.

5. The worst thing of all, Mr. President, they think that America will get drew into the Next War, just like we got in the Last One. But they don't know what you and me know, that we have took the Pledge in America, we don't want no more of the Hairy Dog that bit us in 1917.

Yours truly,
W. NORMAN.
